QUESTION: What is tighter than the news space in today's Collegian?
ANSWER: If we could think of something, we would tell you.

Oh well, things are bad all around, but to accommodate everyone in this, the last issue for the term, we've borrowed this "throw everything together in one story" idea from another local sheet. Don't get upset Dennis, it's only for one day. Here we go:

Everyone knows that football bowl scouts were really messed up by all the upsets last weekend, but the extent of that mess up was just revealed today. Officials from the Cotton and Orange Bowls have announced they are holding off on their selections until Nov. 22. In fact, they asked the Sugar Bowl to join them in the waiting game. Normally the bids would be extended this coming Saturday.

In other football news, linebacker Kurt Allerman and offensive tackle George Reihner will be the guests on tonight's episode of TV Quarterbacks.

Still more football news, and this is a biggie. In the finals of the intramural coed flag-football playoffs, the Flammers defeated Shrimboat 12-0. Guess that's what you call a first fry.

And then there's the sad tale of Matt Suhey. Matt, whose older brothers Larry and Paul play for Penn State, became the state's leading rusher in schoolboy football by gaining a whole mess of yards last weekend. But some guy got out a calculator and the record books, double-checked the figures and — poof! — Matt Suhey is the state's second leading ground gainer, due to a mathematical error the first time around. By the way, Matt will stay there because his high school grid career ended last weekend.

Still more grid notes. A news clipping appeared on our desk the other day telling how Penn State was first in a poll. Yep, the Lions were right there on top. Seems some writer in Iowa interviewed a stewardess who flies the friendly skies with all kinds of sports teams, college and pros. Anyway, Penn State was the best group, in her opinion, to travel with. Well that's fine but it won't get the Nits a bowl bid.

Now we'll dribble over to the basketball courts. The San Diego Sails of the ABA capsized yesterday, the second team in that league to go under this season. Earlier in the year the Baltimore Claws folded.

Riding right along, the Penn State equestrian team placed eighth in a meet last weekend. Betty Prine, Sue Daly, Gilroy Diane (that's what it says) and Carolyn Walters garnered first places for the riders.

In other horse news, Prince Thou Art, winner of the Florida Derby, underwent surgery today to save his life. PTA broke an ankle in a workout at Belmont Park and was taken to New Bolt Center in Kennett Square. For those concerned students who wish PTA the best, why not drop him a card.
