Measles hit campus

Ritenour Health Center has suspended visiting hours indefinitely because of what a spokesman called "a little measles epidemic."

Robert Wirag, director of Health Education at Ritenour, said yesterday the nine measles patients in the dispensary have the highly contagious, red measles (Rubeola) virus. "We want to protect anybody else from coming into contact with them," he said. Infected people transmit measles through a sneeze, cough or contact with clothing or towels.

The first symptoms suggest a severe cold with runny nose, red, watery eyes and a bad cough. This comes 10 to 14 days after exposure to a person who has measles, Wirag said.

Four days after the cold starts, a blotchy red rash appears first on the head and neck, then on the rest of the body. The disease is contagious for four days before the cold begins and five days after the rash first appears.

Wirag said students with cold symptoms should not necessarily think they have measles.

"We're afraid of a panic situation," he said. "Everybody can come in thinking they've got measles. But use a little common sense, covering your mouth when sneezing or coughing."

Wirag also said people who already had measles or who have been vaccinated "have very little to be concerned about."

PHEAA funds open for summer

Applications for summer Pennsylvania Higher Education Assistance grants will be available starting Monday from the Office of Student Aid.

The maximum grant for a University student will be $290, which is 80 per cent of Summer Term tuition.

Students may receive a grant even if they plan to attend a PHEAA-approved institution other than Penn State.

Students must be enrolled full time to be eligible.

According to Joyce Keenan, financial aid counselor and coordinator of the PHEAA grant program for the University, 2,000 to 3,000 University students will get PHEAA grants this summer. "Penn State has one of the larger summer programs," she said.

A total 16,631 University students received PHEAA funds for this academic year.

Co-ed dorm discussion closed

Members of Residential Life and The Association of Residence Hall Students met yesterday to discuss a co-ed housing proposal, but would not allow a Daily Collegian reporter to attend.

M. Lee Upcraft, director of Residential Life, said he considered the meeting to be between students and staff and he would not conduct the meeting until the reporter left.

Rich Cartwright, ARHS vice president and a member of the committee, said yesterday's meeting was mainly an organizational one.

"It was very general. We just didn't want anything to be misconstrued," he said.

The purpose of the committee is to determine the "total effect" of a co-ed housing program, according to Cartwright. He said members are mostly collecting specific data from other schools that have such programs.

The ARHS students are Cartwright, Tim Kavanaugh, Chris Tomasch and Dave Hindman.

Residential Life members are: Upcraft, Phil Grosnick, assistant director of residence hall programs; Tom Eakin, Pollock-Nittany-Centre coordinator; Mark Salvatini, assistant coordinator in Pollock-Nittany-Centre; Glenn Burger, assistant coordinator in South Halls; and Carol Roy, assistant coordinator in Pollock-Nittany-Centre.

FTC to contest cereal monopoly

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Federal Trade Commission investigators, claiming consumers are overcharged millions of dollars a year for breakfast cereals, yesterday asked a judge to break up the country's four biggest cereal makers.

Lawyers for the companies — Kellogg, General Foods, General Mills and Quaker Oats — said the charges were "absolutely absurd."

The complaint, first filed four years ago, contends the four companies engaged for more than 30 years in a "tacit conspiracy" to restrict competition and keep prices higher than they otherwise would have been.

The trial is expected to last most of the summer. The law judge, Harry R. Hinkes, will issue a decision which the full commission may accept, reject or modify. The companies could appeal any ruling of the full FTC to the courts.

Singers offering "Americana"

"Americana," an evening of vocal novelties, will be performed at the fifth annual concert of the Pennsylvania Vocal Ensemble at 8:30 p.m. Thursday and Friday, April 29 and 30, in the Music Bldg. recital hall at the University. The ensemble, made up of 25 vocalists, including University students and singers from the State College area, performs under the direction of Bruce Trinkley, assistant professor of music.

The first portion of the program will consist of Randall Thompson's "Americana" to texts from "The American Mercury"; songs by Charles Wakefield Cadman from the University's Cadman Collection in the music department; Virgil Thomson's "Capital, Capitals" with text by Gertrude Stein; two southern folk hymns; and "General William Booth Enters Heaven" by Charles Ives. In the second portion, a selection of songs by Stephen Foster will be performed. Soloists in this segment will be soprano Karen Scott, assistant professor of music, and baritone Douglas Smith, a music graduate student and assistant director of the ensemble.
