

Reagan asks Ford to debate

By UPI
Ronald Reagan emerged from seclusion yesterday to challenge President Ford to a debate at the Republican National Convention next month.
Ford, who planned later in the day to meet with and answer questions from the 154-member New York delegation, indicated no such confrontation would take place.
Reagan, who planned to take a two-week "breather" out of the public eye at his ranch near Santa Barbara, Calif., was interviewed on the NBC "Today" program, and complained that the President recently said there was no major difference between the two candidates.

"I've come to the conclusion there's one logical way to settle this and particularly for the uncommitted," Reagan said.
"And that is I think that both of us should appear and debate the issues before the Republican National Convention and let them make their decision."
White House press secretary Ron Nessen said, "It seems to me that in Kansas City both candidates should be concentrating on how to unify the Republican party to prepare for the fall election campaign and should not be considering things that could possibly be divisive or divide the Republican party."
Reagan said Ford's claim on 1,119 of the 1,130 delegates needed for the presidential nomination is "an attempt to snowball the uncommitted into thinking they must jump on the bandwagon."

The UPI delegate count shows Ford with 1,114, Reagan with 1,062 and 83 uncommitted. Reagan claimed many of the Ford votes are either "soft" or are not accurate reflections of delegates' true feelings.
The Californian, who is tentatively planning a trip to meet with some of the New York delegates the first week of August, also reiterated he has no intention of serving as Ford's running-mate, even if the President asks him to take the spot in the interest of party unity.
Reagan also charged that some of the Ford campaigners have been "a little heavy handed" with favors they can confer upon the uncommitted.
But Nessen said Ford has issued instructions to Cabinet members that "no official action or position on any matter by anyone in the administration shall be, directly or indirectly, offered, promised or provided as consideration, favor or reward for the support of any delegate to benefit the President's candidacy."

Democrat Jimmy Carter yesterday returned to New York City, where he was nominated last week, to meet with news and business executives.
The main issue the businessmen were concerned with was Carter's tax reform plans.
"When I get through, the system will be fair," he said.
"The businessmen are concerned to some degree, but they need not be. I'm going to be very cautious about reforming the income tax structure."

Centre County hosts city kids

By KEVIN A. O'HARA
Collegian Staff Writer
Getting the children off the hot streets and out into the country for fresh air and a vacation is the primary goal of New York City's Fresh Air Fund Charity. It has been fulfilling that goal with increasing success since it organized in 1887.
Here in Centre County, the local Fresh Air Fund has been helping for the past 13 years by providing summer vacations for less fortunate New York City children.
Co-chairpersons of the 1976 Fresh Air Fund, Helen Fagley and Sally Larson, have been totally involved this summer. The Centre County program, which provides 115 children with vacations, includes year-round fund raising and is sponsored by the Optimist Club. Larson praised Wendy Williams of WRSC Radio for his promotional support and noted that families across the county have opened their doors to New York youth.
With all the arrangements made during the spring, the local program began July 5 when five area residents traveled to New York City to be escorts for the incoming vacationers. In the city, they met the children at the Port Authority, checked to make sure everyone was accounted for, and then drove via chartered bus toward the green mountains and fresh air of central Pennsylvania. Seventy-three children, ages 5 to 12, arrived here July 7 to vacation with their pre-arranged sponsors. Their visits vary in length from two to six weeks with a second group expected to arrive in early August.

Mr. and Mrs. Allen "Pepsi" Larson of State College have been hosts for the past nine summers. This year, three youngsters, Scott Simmons, Doris Callaway, and Celeste Washington, ages 12, 11, and 5, have been enjoying the Larson's hospitality. Doris and Scott have returned each summer, as many of the children do, to the homes of their original host families. Young Celeste is already anticipating next year's visit. Close and lasting relationships have been developed by these annual reunions.

Mrs. Larson, already the mother of three children, said that the entire experience was gratifying, though slightly exhausting. She mentioned a variety of activities, including swimming, hiking, camping, and the Festival of the Arts that the children fully appreciated. Beaming smiles and a happy excitement testified to their enthusiasm.
For many, their summer frolicking lasted only two short weeks. They departed from the Nittany Mall yesterday at 11 a.m. Others will enjoy longer stays, and the other 40 youngsters will arrive in August. At New York's Fresh Air Fund headquarters, Centre County is known as "one of the friendliest host communities." Luckily, we all don't have to leave home to appreciate that.

Police recover beer keg

An RA in Beaver Hall reported to University police Tuesday that he had confiscated a quarter keg of beer from a student living in the dorm. Police recovered the keg but no charges were filed. The student was only storing the keg until it could be returned to the distributor, police discovered.

Howard Douglas Arnold, 309 Porter Hall, was arraigned before District Magistrate Clifford Yorks Tuesday and charged with marijuana possession in connection with a police search at an alleged Porter Hall pot party July 17. Date for the preliminary hearing is July 29.

Grad Council plans on exam of degrees

The Graduate Council voted unanimously Tuesday to appoint a committee to examine the indistinction between a Doctor of Philosophy degree and a Doctor of Education degree when offered within the same faculty and to make recommendations accordingly.
Uncertainty concerning the difference in degrees was expressed by both students and faculty members in a review of two graduate programs.

A program review of Vocational Industrial Education states, "Students perceived little or no distinction between the Ph.D. and D.Ed." A program review of Home Economics Education says, "The graduate faculty were not able to give a clear picture of distinctions between the Doctor of Education and the Ph.D. degree. There was little evidence of systematic criteria used in determining which degree should be offered to a student."

Warren E. Smith, director of general education arts, noted that the vague distinction between degrees is not limited to these two programs but is a campus-wide problem.

Twyla Shear, home economics professor, described a Ph.D. as an academic degree for a student intending to be a scholar or researcher, while a D.Ed. is a professional degree for a student planning to do practical work.

Joseph W. Michels, professor of anthropology, suggested that a committee establish a criteria to differentiate a professional commitment from a scholarly commitment. Shear recommended that program autonomy be retained even if a program has two divisions.
