

2 men charged with lewdness

United Methodist Church, 1320 Houserville Road, State College, police said. Estimated value was $243.

Jonathan L. Zweizig and Frank H. Torko, students, were arraigned before District Magistrate Clifford Yorks Monday and charged with open lewdness and disorderly conduct. The charges were made in connection with a July 20 incident when two males allegedly exposed themselves to a University female employee near Carnegie Building.

A Harrisburg woman was arraigned yesterday before District Magistrate Clifford Yorks Monday and charged with attempting to obtain drugs by fraud through a prescription. Lorraine Clarice Roberts, 512 Hamilton St., Harrisburg, was committed to Centre County Prison in lieu of $1,500 bail. Date for the preliminary hearing has been set for Aug. 3.

COG reviews code plan

By LISA SPERR
Collegian Staff Writer

The Centre Region Council of Governments (COG) Monday referred the code enforcement program back to the municipalities for discussion.

In a committee review of the program, Howard F. Kingsbury, its chairman, said the municipalities participating in the program (Ferguson, Patton, College and State College) should consider three questions:

—Are the members, in principle, willing to support a regional code enforcement program?

—Do the municipalities wish to commit themselves for a specific period of time such as three to five years, or would they rather have the current open-ended agreement, an agreement that allows a municipality to back out if they give notice 60 days before the January 1 budget deadline?

—What services do the municipalities expect from the program and at what level and frequency?

The program includes building and housing code enforcement and inspection and fire safety inspection. It may include architectural review of plans, fire lane enforcement and bar occupancy enforcement.

State College Municipal Manager Carl Fairbanks said the code program has been a good one and that there has been a general desire for more use of the program rather than less.

State College Municipal Councilman James McClure said he saw a difficulty with the program in that there is more need for enforcement in the State College area than in the other municipalities. He said it would be difficult to come up with a program to fulfill the varying municipality needs.

Replies to McClure, Kingsbury suggested that a basic program to include building, housing and fire enforcement concerns common to all municipalities be implemented. He said that any municipality that wanted special services such as bar occupancy enforcement could pay for that service.

The municipalities have two months to discuss these questions and make their recommendations to the code enforcement committee scheduled to report back to COG in October.

In other matters, COG discussed the possibility of Centre Region localities giving financial support to the Centre County Home Health Services.

Thomas S. Kurtz, COG general secretary, asked whether the service would be a good service or whether it would duplicate services already offered. He asked whether the localities should pay for a county-wide service.

State College Municipal Councilman Arnold Addison suggested that COG find out how much health service is provided in the Centre Region and to whom before making definite commitments.

Hunt for kidnapers shifts to Northwest

SAN LEANDRO, Calif. (AP) — The nationwide hunt for the Chowchilla mass kidnapers shifted to the Northwest after confirmed sightings in Washington and Idaho of one man wanted in the case, the FBI reported yesterday.

Drukin said both sightings were around "business establishments" and that Schoenfeld pawned or sold some materials at both locations.

"Through investigation we came up with these sightings," Drukin confirmed in an interview. He refused to say how the sightings were confirmed but said the store owners had not contacted authorities.
