

Drunken driving charged

Edwin P. Sankey, a mechanical engineering student, was arraigned before District Magistrate Clifford Yorks on Monday and charged with drunken driving. A car driven by Sankey had allegedly struck a car driven by Sandra Cohen, (12th-individual and family studies), early Saturday morning at the intersection of Shortlidge Road and College Ave, University police said. Estimated damage was $1,100.

Ross Grim, a student, was arraigned before Yorks yesterday and charged with theft and criminal mischief. According to the police report, Grim was apprehended Aug. 6 in connection with an alleged attempt to remove a sign from Shortlidge road.

Benjamin Berembeck, 445 Waupelani Drive, reported that his automobile had been stolen from Parking Lot 83 N Tuesday. Value of the vehicle is undetermined.

Harris trial ends angrily

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The trial of William and Emily Harris came to an angry and confusing end yesterday with the judge rejecting a defense motion for a mistrial on grounds the jury that found them guilty was tainted by prejudice against the young SLA couple.

In a rare post-verdict session following Monday's convictions of kidnaping, robbery and auto theft, the 12 regular and 4 alternate jurors were brought back into the courtroom individually and questioned about incidents that occurred during the jury selection period in June.

The most striking development of the day was the testimony by one of the alternates that she saw Jonathan Beres, a college student who sat as one of the regular jurors, make a noose out of a piece of string to "pass the time" in a jury assembly room.

Three of the regular jurors and two alternates also testified they saw another prospective juror, Pat Shannahan, construct a toy gallows with a black-board eraser, a pencil and paper clips and hang paper dolls of a male and female on it.

Shannahan was removed from the panel in the early days of jury selection by a peremptory challenge by the defense.

The three regular jurors who saw the model gallows said they were not affected in any way by the incident in reaching their verdicts.

Recreation plan tabled

The State College Area School District decided Monday night to delay approval for the first phase of developing the Haugh Tract near Valley Vista Drive until a written plan for the tract is presented.

Board member Robert Dunham requested the written presentation before approval because he wanted to see exactly what the school board is planning to use the tract for.

William E. Babcock, school superintendent, said the University has encouraged the district to look for another place to set up its outdoor programs that include camping, rather than using Stone Valley.

The Haugh Tract, if finally approved and constructed, will have tennis courts, a playing field, a pond, a camping area, a wildlife refuge, an orchard and plots for growing crops.

The Board also put off approval needed to transfer the title of Fairmount East Playground to the municipality of State College until an estimate of the value of the half-acre plot could be obtained.

Babcock had urged the title transfer to the municipality "clear and free," because the municipality may assess the Board for improvement in the area.

Rather than pay the assessment, Babcock said, the Board should give the title to the municipality because the municipality had been using it for a recreation area and had improved it with play equipment.

Although the ground is too small to put up school buildings, several Board members had suggested selling the land to the municipality or another party to supplement the district's funds.
