

Bruins to top OSU says AP

NEW YORK (AP) — There is a good reason why football coaches switch from colleges to the pros. It's called graduation.

A college coach may recruit a dream team, but the best he can offer this group of athletes is a four-year contract. After he has coddled them, educated them and turned them into football players, they pick up their diplomas — sometimes — open a bank account and head for the pros.

It's enough to make a college coach turn professional, or wish he did. Graduation is the great equalizer. And for all their successes, Barry Switzer, Woody Hayes and Bear Bryant haven't been able to stop their best players from becoming alumni. If they had, this Saturday would not be such a black day for Switzer and Oklahoma, Hayes and Ohio State and Bryant and Alabama.

No. 3 Oklahoma at Iowa State: Spitzer is 35-1-1 since becoming head coach at Oklahoma. The Sooners have beaten Iowa State 43 times in their 48 meetings, including last year's 39-7 romp. But last year Switzer could call on Jerry and Dewey Selmon, Jimmie Elrod, Joe Washington, Tinker Owens and Billy Brooks.

So Newton's Law has finally caught up to the Big 8. What goes up must come down ... Iowa State 27, Oklahoma 18.

No. 4 UCLA at No. 8 Ohio State: Since Hayes never discussed UCLA's upset of Ohio State in the Jan. 1 Rose Bowl, we must presume he didn't know why his Buckeyes lost. He has had nearly 10 months to find the answers but has lost too many players from last year to solve the problems.

Last luminaries such as Archie Griffin, Cornelius Greene, Brian Bachnagel and Tim Fox can only supply moral support, which won't help Hayes get retribution over the Bruins, who foiled Ohio State's national championship bid with a 23-10 Rose Bowl victory ... UCLA 26, Ohio State 21.

Wake Forest at No. 1 Michigan: There will be some 100,000 spectators at Ann Arbor. None of them, including the 50 or so Wake Forest players on the sidelines, expect anything but a Wolverine rout ... Michigan 63, Wake Forest 7.

No. 2 Pitt at Duke: In a game between a couple of four-letter words, Pitt's Tony, as in TD, Dorselt, becomes a real course to Duke ... Pitt 35, Duke 13.

Linkwomen on road to Brockport for easterns

The Lady Lion golfers travel to Brockport, New York, this weekend to compete in the EAIWA Championships. Coach Annette Thompson is hopeful that her squad can better last week's second place performance at the Mount Holyoke Invitational.

"Unfortunately, we won't be able to redeem ourselves against Mount Holyoke (winner of last week's tournament), said Thompson. "But I think we're in better physical shape and will play with a lot more consistency. Our strongest competition will probably be from the University of Massachusetts."

Penn State, used to playing on a long course, will have an advantage at Brockport. The course measures 5500 yards, somewhat shorter than the White course, and has an unusual combination of front and back nines. The front nine is parallel to a gorge, and the back nine is open, running along Lake Canadigua.

Each team competes with five players, using the best two scores of the day, an uncommon setup for a college tournament. Most use the four best scores out of six.

"We decided to keep the EAIWA for two-player teams because we thought it would be better for the smaller schools. But sometimes it penalizes teams like Penn State, who have a lot of depth. A team with only two really good golfers can easily beat a squad with four strong girls," said Thompson.

A fairly young Penn State team will compete at Brockport. Junior Judy Mitchell, ranked sixth in the state, is the team's oldest player. Probably the most seasoned golfer is sophomore Renie Kelleher. She has acquired a lot of experience, both on the sectional and national level. Kelly Grimes is also a veteran. Two freshmen, Sally Salter and Kathy Patrick, join this year's squad.
