Weekend meetings productive Settlement near in UAW strike

DETROIT (AP) — Negotiators for the United Auto Workers and Ford Motor Co. gathered for more meetings yesterday amid indications they were on the verge of settling the 19-day nationwide strike.

Negotiators held an all-day meeting Saturday that lasted into the evening, and some sources said they thought a tentative agreement could be in the offing. It was the second late-night meeting in a row in the talks aimed at settling the strike, which began when 170,000 Ford hourly workers walked off the job Sept. 15.

"Things are at a delicate state. We just can't tell you any more than that," said one UAW official. "We don't want to get the trolley off the rails."

A union spokesman said the two sides held a main table session Saturday before breaking into several sub-committee meetings. He would not say what issues were discussed.

After negotiations were recessed shortly after 10 p.m. Saturday, UAW President Leonard Woodcock was asked by a reporter as he left company headquarters whether an agreement could be reached yesterday. He replied it could but he would not commit himself to "the time frame."

UAW negotiator Mike Renaldi said at mid-day, "Things look a little brighter now." Renaldi said a new three-year accord could be forged over the weekend. "But it's up to Ford," he added. "They know what it takes."

A union source said the two sides made further gains in the talks Saturday and no new hitches cropped up which might impede a settlement. But even if the strike is settled, the walk out could drag on for at least another week because of the union's long ratification process.

But business analysts have said the strike would have no major negative effect on the nation's economy if it is settled in less than a month.

The UAW and Ford officials are working to create a pattern-setting agreement that will provide the basis of new pacts covering 700,000 auto workers at the four major U.S. car producers.

The two sides reportedly remained divided over several issues, including a company demand that cost increases for fringe benefits be paid with money generated from future cost-of-living wage adjustments that otherwise would go directly to workers.

Neither side has disclosed what is being sought by the union and what has been offered by the company.

Strikers last week picked up their first strike benefit checks.

Police catch man firing BBs at dorm windows

University police have withheld the identity of a man apprehended yesterday after allegedly firing BBs at the dorm room window of Edward Irwin (10th-accounting), 307 C Holmes Building, police said.

Irwin was not hurt.

"I was watching TV when I heard this pop, like from an air rifle," he said. "It just made a tiny hole in the window screen."

Irwin said he did not know the alleged attacker.

The weapon, a target revolver, was transported, with additional BB pellets, to Police Services, Grange Building, police said.

Further details of the incident were to be released later today. Police are still investigating.
