

2 oil powers to increase prices by 5 per cent

By United Press International
Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates, who provide one-third of U.S. oil imports, will raise the price of their oil by 5 per cent today, the Kuwait newspaper Al Anba reported yesterday.

The increase would bring an end to the price war among the 13 members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC), with at least 11 of the members charging the same price for crude oil.

The Kuwaiti report followed a public declaration Wednesday by nine of the other 11 OPEC members canceling a previous decision to implement a 5 per cent price hike of their own today.

If the Saudis and Emirates now raised their current prices by 5 per cent, most of the OPEC nations would charge the same price for oil at a rate 10 per cent above the 1976 prices.

The only blemish on the decision of nine OPEC members to cancel their price hikes was a decision by Iraq and Libya not to join the others in signing the public policy statement.

However, oil sources said this appeared to be more a gesture of their displeasure at not going ahead with the price increase rather than a signal of a new split within the oil cartel.

The sources said it would be difficult for the two nations to go ahead with a 5 per cent price increase on their own in a world market dominated by the other 11 OPEC members charging cheaper prices.

Al Anba, quoting what it said were "reliable sources" for its report, said Saudi Arabia and the Emirates made their decision to raise prices in an effort to compromise with other OPEC members and put an end to the price split that had threatened to undermine the oil cartel.

In a related development, Venezuelan President Carlos Andres Perez, one of the chief architects of the price compromise, also said on Wednesday he thought the Saudis and Emirates would raise their prices in line with the others.

Internal strife kills SEATO

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — The Southeast Asia Treaty Organization, born 23 years ago from the fears of the Cold War, died quietly yesterday, unmourned.

The Stars and Stripes was the first of the flags lowered for the last time from SEATO headquarters yesterday afternoon. Nobody played taps and there were no officials present, except SEATO employees whose regular duty it has been since 1954 to raise and lower the flags at the Bangkok headquarters.

From Hanoi, Vietnam said the end of SEATO showed "the bankruptcy of a reactionary strategy masterminded by the United States in this region."

Because of SEATO, founded at the instigation of the United States and including such farflung partners as Britain, France, Pakistan, the Philippines, Australia, New Zealand and Thailand, the tide of communism in Asia was staunch for perhaps a decade.

This was the strategy of the late Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, who repeatedly insisted that the allies "stem the tide of communism" in Asia.

His was a "policy of containment" — another of his slogans — against the threat from mainland China.

SEATO was technically a creature of Article Four of the Manila Pact.

Article Four was invoked by the United States and Saigon governments to get other member nations committed to the Vietnam War. Beneath what came to be called the "Umbrella clause," Article Four included the Indochinese states of Cambodia, Vietnam and Laos.

Using arguments of Secretary Dulles, former Secretary of State Dean Rusk in 1964 convinced other member nations to send troops to Vietnam, Australia, New Zealand, the Philippines and Thailand all sent troops in proportion to their armed forces.

U.N. Council advocates aid

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — The United Nations Security Council yesterday called upon all nations to help Mozambique defend its borders against Rhodesian raids.

The resolution unanimously adopted by all 13 council members stopped short of recommending military aid.

But observers noted that its wording was ambiguous enough to leave the type of aid up to the discretion of individual suppliers.

U.S. Ambassador Andrew Young coupled praise for the resolution with a stern warning to Rhodesia that it must not expect "the United States, now or ever, to rescue it from the position in which it has placed itself."

He called upon all U.N. states to "redouble their efforts to make sure sanctions against Rhodesia are enforced."

Western diplomatic sources stressed that the resolution does not commit them to extending military aid to Mozambique.

But they pointed out that it does not prohibit other states such as the Soviet Union from doing so.

The 14-point resolution introduced by black African delegations Wednesday asks all nations to give "immediate and substantial material assistance" to Mozambique.

It also calls upon member states and U.N. agencies to provide financial, technical and material assistance to Mozambique to help it overcome the economic losses caused by the Rhodesian incursions and by the economic embargo against Rhodesia.

Many fleeing Vietnam gov't

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Aided by corrupt officials and the Hanoi government's inability to patrol all of a long coastline, Vietnamese are still fleeing their Communist-ruled homeland in increasing numbers.

U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance called the continuing Indochina exodus one of "the world's urgent humanitarian concerns" and has urged that countries not turn their backs on "these unfortunate people."

More than 300 Vietnamese arrived at Thai ports in June and scores of others sailed to other — not always friendly — countries in the region. Some Vietnamese were picked up by passing freighters. Still others watched as ocean-going vessels passed them by on the high seas.

Africa plagued with invasions

By The Associated Press

Diplomats in Addis Ababa said yesterday that "hostile elements" in uniform had occupied an Ethiopian town near the Sudan border and some reports said the invaders were Sudanese.

Elsewhere in troubled East Africa, Kenya charged that 10,000 Somali troops had invaded northern Kenya. Somalia denied the charge and said the invaders were probably Ethiopians.

Western diplomats in Addis Ababa, the Ethiopian capital, said missionaries along the western border with Sudan reported that the town of Beica — in Worrege Province 23 miles from the border and 300 miles west of Addis Ababa — was occupied by "people in uniform" two or three days ago.
