

Celebrating Yankee fans leave stadium a wreck

NEW YORK (AP) — Officials at Yankee Stadium faced plenty of housework and several fans still were smarting yesterday in the aftermath of a riotous celebration of the New York Yankees' 1977 World Series victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Thousands of fans, described by police as a human wave, rushed the field Tuesday night after Mike Torrez caught a pop fly to end the third game of the Series with the Yankees defeating the Dodgers 8-4.

They were met by a posse of mounted policemen that immediately tried to charge them off the field — to no avail — and then by hundreds of stick-wielding policemen. About 20 fans and at least three officers were treated later at Lincoln Hospital for a variety of injuries. One fan suffered a compound fracture to his leg after jumping from the second tier of Yankee Stadium.

The zealous climbed over walls and plundered through the press boxes, over typewriters and fingers, to get to the field.

As the hordes descended, Yankee outfielder Reggie Jackson, who slugged three home runs to tie Babe Ruth's 51-year-old record, ran from the field, bowling over two fans.

The first fans to reach home plate engaged in a tug of war for it, only to rip it to shreds.

The partisans pursued the Dodgers as they left the stadium, as though to run them out of town, pummeling the team bus with food and clumps of dirt scooped from the pitcher's mound.

And police wondered how it would have been if the hometown boys had lost.

ISC to kick it up at Jeffrey Field

Women's soccer a growing sport

By CHRIS MORKIDES
Daily Collegian Sports Writer

Most of you guys who are finding it difficult to obtain dates with members of the opposite sex are probably wondering how girls are getting their kicks these days.

Well, if you want to find out, go to Jeffrey Field tomorrow at 5:30 p.m. and watch the Penn State Women's Club Soccer team do battle with the Super "F" team of New York in a preliminary struggle before the Penn State-Navy soccer game.

Friday's match will be the culmination of a lot of work that has gone into getting women's club soccer at Penn State off the ground.

The women's team is part of the International Soccer Club (ISC) which was founded by Penn State grad students in 1970. At first, ISC was all male but in the winter of 1976 the constitution was rewritten in order to allow women to join. After the revision 30 women were admitted to the club.

After extensive drills and practices, the girls entered a State College soccer league this past spring. The team was something of an oddity in that it was the only female team in the league.

"At first, the men on the other teams didn't treat us as rough," ISC President Wendy Coyle said, "but after they found out that we weren't feeble they treated us the same."

"It was frustrating at the beginning playing against men's teams who had been playing together for years," Coyle continued, "but at the end we really started to play well together as a team."

Although the women's team didn't win a game during the league's regular season, they recorded their initial victory in the playoffs before losing in the finals.

During the summer the girls played co-ed soccer and are now playing a full slate of games against other women's soccer teams. So far this season the women's team is 3-0 with two victories over Greer High School in Tyrone and a 10-0 shellacking over Franklin and Marshall's varsity team.

But it's Friday's game which is the most important for the team. It is the first time they will play a preliminary before the men's soccer game. In the Super "F" squad they will meet an experienced team of college and working women.

"We're really excited about this match," Coyle said. "A lot of people have put a lot of effort in to make this go."

Coyle has put in a lot of time and knows the ups and downs of women's club soccer at Penn State.

"When I first started playing in the summer of '76 I was the only girl and I became very frustrated," she said. "I ran into a lot of attitudes like 'women shouldn't play soccer because it destroys their identity.'"

Coyle believes that women's soccer has gained credibility since that time.

"Soccer is a very new thing for girls," Coyle said. "Now that ISC has taken the initiative to form a women's team more and more girls will come out. In time, women's soccer will achieve varsity status."

Coached by ex-Penn State soccer player Audie Penecale, the women's soccer team boasts 40 members. Of the 40, Coyle said most have had previous experience playing soccer in high school or in college intramurals.

The girls practice on Monday and Wednesdays from 5 p.m. until dark. Weekends are reserved for official matches and co-ed games.

Coyle credits Penn State soccer coach Walt Bahr, Penecale and men's club team member Keith Burgess, among others, as being instrumental in helping the women's team along.

"I'm definitely happy with the way the girls have progressed," Burgess said. "Some of them really have a good head for the game."

Abdul-Jabbar retaliates for 'cheap shot,' breaks hand

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Kareem Abdul-Jabbar suffered a broken bone in his right hand when he slugged Milwaukee rookie Kent Benson on Tuesday night and the all-star center of the Los Angeles Lakers will be out indefinitely.

Abdul-Jabbar, who said he had been elbowed in the stomach, punched his foe and was banished from the opening National Basketball Association game. It was determined yesterday that Abdul-Jabbar suffered a fractured fourth metacarpal.

Dr. Herbert Stark, an orthopedic surgeon, will examine the 7-foot-2 player this morning to determine if a protective device can be made that will not impede the healing process and still allow Abdul-Jabbar to play.

He will probably miss tomorrow night's game in Denver, but may be able to play Sunday in the Lakers' home opener against Phoenix.

The fracture was discovered yesterday when precautionary X-rays were taken when the team arrived in Indianapolis.

"I retaliated for a cheap shot and sneak attack," said Abdul-Jabbar. "I got an elbow in my stomach."

Abdul-Jabbar said he was sorry about the broken hand but said he would do the same thing again in a similar situation.

Is it sick to love a pen?

Not if it's an extraordinary Pilot Razor Point marker pen. A fiber-tipped pen so precisely balanced, it will always feel comfortable in your hand, even after hours of writing. Its sturdy plastic point, surrounded by a unique Pilot metal "collar" writes a distinctly smooth, sharp line. In fact, it's the thinnest tipped pen you can buy. And that makes it just great for pages of notes or that one important love letter. Best of all, it's only 69c and is now available at your college book store.

So if your Pilot pen makes you lovesick, don't be ashamed to admit it. After all, it'll always be good to you.
