

ISC finishes third in tourney, but women's soccer big winner

By LESLIE BOBB
Daily Collegian Sports Writer

The final score is in. The International Soccer Club has notched another victory in its battle to gain recognition for women's soccer.

Credit for the victory must be given to Wendy Coyle, director of the first Women's Indoor Invitational Soccer Tournament held Saturday and Sunday. Give an assist to the University for its help in making the tournament a success.

"The tournament, as a whole, went very smoothly," said Coyle, who helped the ISC squad take third place in the tournament. "Penn State gave us ample support and backing and good organization."

The tournament attracted teams from Virginia, New York and Washington, D.C., a part of the growing interest in soccer as a women's sport.

"In Virginia, women's soccer is growing," said Rhea Linkoun, a member of that state's "Hellcats." "We now have 20 teams in Fairfax County with an average of 16 women on each team."

Linkoun is not the only person who has noticed the rise in women's soccer's popularity.

"Compared to the first years that we played (1975), women's soccer has really grown," said Marian Gillan, a player on the Great Danes from Reston, Virginia. "Now there are lots of intramural teams and recreation programs being started."

The players expressed hope that this tournament might mark the beginning of a tradition of such tournaments.

"We would like to participate in tournaments in the spring and winter," said Teresa Bushman, a player on the Tidal Basin Blues who beat the Meteors 6-0 to win the tournament championship.

"According to Coyle, there will be lots of upcoming tournaments.

"Just about every team talked about having a tournament in the spring and summer," said Coyle. "I think this tournament has initiated a series of soccer tournaments for women. Within time, they'll grow to a more massive level."

There were no varsity teams competing in the tournament. All the squads were made up of diverse individuals who represented clubs in their areas. The ISC was the only competing team affiliated with a university.

"This club has just been formed. Most of the team members are married and the average age is 31," Hellcats coach Wally Ambrose said.

Even though they did not participate in the tournament, there are three other women's soccer clubs associated with a university: Villanova, Franklin and Marshall and Lehigh. Some universities have developed varsity squads but Coyle sees many advantages to being a club.

"Most of the Ivy League schools have varsity squads, but they are limited to playing only the fall season, while we can play from summer-to-summer," Coyle said.

As evidenced by the turnout Sunday, people are finally realizing that men are not the only ones who can play soccer well. This tournament gave the women the chance to showcase their skills and Coyle envisions a future that holds even greater opportunities for women.

Lions avoid upset No. 2 Sallitt saves wrestlers

By RICK WEBER
Daily Collegian Sports Writer

It seems as if everyone is out to knock off the seventh-ranked wrestling team these days.

Clarion State College, turned on by a frenzied capacity crowd, upset the Lions, 24-15, last Thursday. Bloomsburg State College, sparked by its own full house, tried to do the same thing Saturday. And it almost pulled off a second consecutive shocker.

The Huskies got wins at 126, 134 and 177, but Penn State got a match-clinching victory by Sam Sallitt at 190, and hung on to notch a 19-14 win.

Before Sallitt took the mat, the Lions were clinging to a narrow 16-11 lead over Bloomsburg. With Penn State expecting a loss at heavyweight, the outcome lay almost completely in the hands of Sallitt.

Sallitt did not disappoint. With the score tied at nine and two minutes remaining in the bout, Sallitt got a penalty point, reversal and two takedowns to win, 17-11, and clinch Penn State's ninth win in 10 tries.

"Sallitt has been wrestling good for us all year," Lion coach Bill Koll said. "I don't think he wrestled as good a match as he has earlier but he wrestled good enough to beat the guy."

Koll thought Dave Becker's 18-6 victory over Gibbs Johnson at 158 was the key to the win.

"That was really the turning point in the meet," Koll said. "He so totally dominated his man that I think it took a lot of them psychologically as a team. Becker really pounded their man."

Ashley Swift, who continually comes up with clutch efforts, gave Penn State a boost with a 3-3 draw at 167. The Huskies had expected Andy Capelli (25-5), their top wrestler with five falls, to manhandle Swift.

"It was very big because they had planned on winning there," Koll said. "They might even have thought they were going to get a fall there. They were pretty upset-minded. I think they honestly thought they could beat us."

The Lions have been forced to scramble at the middle weights in the last two meets because of losses at 126 by freshman Scott DeAugustino. Normally, Penn State can count on at least a 6-0 lead after the first two bouts.

"It's simply a matter of total team balance," Koll said. "A good team should be able to pick up points anywhere along the lineup. Usually, the lower weights have been giving us a big lead and now, there's more responsibility on the upper weights. It puts more pressure on the team up above, but that's what gives you a measure of what kind of team you have.

"Bloomsburg has a very well-balanced team. In terms of lineups, they should give us a better match than Clarion because they line up tougher for us. But we wrestled so flat at Clarion that it wasn't a measure of what kind of team we were. We wrestled better against Bloomsburg, although I think the boys are still tired from midterms and the last three trips."

TAKEDOWNS: Penn State is 9-1 overall and 2-1 in Eastern Wrestling League competition. The Lions' loss to Clarion was their first league ever... Some individual records: Mike DeAugustino, 18-1; Becker, 17-1-1; Bill Voltrath, 18-2-1; Dan Pfautz, 16-4-1; Scott DeAugustino, 13-4-1. Next match is at home against Navy on Saturday.

118 — M. DeAugustino, PS, dec. Mock, 8-1.
126 — Fink, B, dec. S. DeAugustino, 7-3.
131 — Poff, B, dec. Frantz, 6-4.
142 — Brodhead, PS, dec. G. Schneider, 7-3.
158 — Voltrath, PS, dec. Caravella, 8-2.
158 — Becker, PS, super sup. dec. Johnson, 18-6.
167 — Swift, PS, drew with Capelli, B, 3-3.
170 — DiGiacchino, B, dec. Pfautz, 9-3.
170 — Sallitt, PS, dec. B. Snyder, 17-11.
171 — Sharp, B, dec. R. Snyder, 13-8.
