Week-long coal strike is halted

By the Associated Press

A week-long wildcat strike by an estimated 6,000 coal miners in western Pennsylvania has ended.

The miners, members of United Mine Workers District 2, returned to work yesterday, according to union officials.

The officials said the back-to-work movement came after weekend meetings by several locals and a Sunday meeting in Ebsenburg attended by presidents of locals in the district.

The strike began last Monday when pickets idled about 1,000 workers at Greenwich Collieries in Cambria County. The walkout then spread to other mines in Indiana and Armstrong counties.

The pickets said they were striking in sympathy with UMW Local 1880. The local has been on strike since May against North Cambria Fuel Co., which has refused to sign the national coal agreement.

The walkout was marred by violence at mid-week when a group of about 300 pickets damaged equipment at a North Cambria Fuel tippie near Blairsville.

They also scuffled with state police, who arrested six persons.

A contempt of court hearing for those six, originally scheduled for today in Indiana County, yesterday was rescheduled for Thursday.

Transportation for parochial schools is sought

PITTSBURGH (AP) — An Allegheny County couple yesterday asked the courts to force the McKeesport and Pittsburgh school districts to provide daily transportation for parochial school children.

Frank and Anna Grunwald of Dravosburg filed suit in Civil Division Court on behalf of their three children, who attend a parochial elementary school five miles outside the McKeesport district's boundaries.

The Pittsburgh district was included in the suit because it is the only other district in Allegheny County which does not provide the service.

The class action suit seeks relief for all parochial school students in the two districts affected since the 1973-74 school year.

Both districts contend Act 372 of 1972 is unconstitutional. It provides free transportation for students who attend non-public schools within 10 miles of the district's boundaries.

Act 372 was unanimously upheld by Commonwealth Court when the Pittsburgh School District appealed it last winter. But the court overturned an order by the state's education secretary requiring the district to forfeit transportation subsidies.

The Commonwealth Court ruling has been appealed to the state Supreme Court.

Senate to aid booksales

USG to publish tabloid

By MARY ELLEN WRIGHT

Daily Collegian Staff Writer

A bill appropriating $704 for establishing an Undergraduate Student Government book sale tabloid was passed last night by the USG Senate.

USG Senator Jim Pfeifle said one issue of the tabloid, which will be called "Campus Bookshop," will be published as an experiment. The publication will serve as a medium through which students can announce textbooks they want to sell, he said.

Some senators protested the funding of the project, citing complaints from one of the people in charge of the Association of Residence Hall Students book co-op that the tabloid would duplicate an existing service.

"I can't see running the same thing and being in direct conflict with ARHS," Senator Vicki Sandoe said.

Pfeifle said he is working on an alternative idea to work for students, not to "cut the book co-op down to nothing."

Senate president Molly New said the tabloid idea would be a simple way for students to sell their books because they would handle the sales by themselves.

The Senate also approved the loan of $570 to the USG

Department of Communications for putting out a campus-wide student government publication to help increase communication between students and USG.

A member of the department said USG has a "lousy reputation" with students because of poor publicity. The bill says the loan must be paid back to the Senate at the rate of $100 per published issue.

In other business, the Senate voted to give $45 to Students for a Pennsylvania Public Interest Research Group to aid in expanding the organization's present petition drive to the Commonwealth Campuses.

Jeff Goldsmith, head of Students for PennPIRG, said it is the duty of student government to show the Commonwealth Campuses they are "an integral part of Penn State."

The senate also voted to table until next week a bill calling for a written USG treasurer's report disclosing USG's current financial value.

The bill states the subject of disclosure should be discussed in a special closed session of the USG Senate. Some senators protested the idea of a closed discussion, saying USG should not be afraid to disclose to the public what is being done with the students' student government money.

Cianfrani given five-day furlough from Allenwood Federal Prison

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Henry J. "Buddy" Cianfrani, the former state senator now serving a federal prison term, has been granted a five-day emergency furlough to help arrange his father's funeral, a spokesman at Allenwood Federal Prison Camp said yesterday.

Cianfrani's father, Henry C. Cianfrani, a former state representative, died of cancer Saturday at the Atlantic City Medical Center in New Jersey. He was 84 and had lived in Brigantine, N.J., since 1966.

The prison spokesman said Cianfrani left the prison Sunday morning and is due to return Thursday night.

This is the second time in recent weeks that Cianfrani has been given a furlough to attend to personal business. He was released in late September to appear in Philadelphia Family Court to petition against a support order for his children.

Cianfrani began serving a five-year sentence at Allenwood in February. He pleaded guilty in December to 106 counts of mail fraud, racketeering and obstruction of justice, and no contest to four counts of income tax evasion.

Funeral services for the elder Cianfrani will be tomorrow. Born in Philadelphia, he was elected to the Pennsylvania House of Representatives in 1952, serving five terms. He was succeeded in 1962 by his son, who later moved to the state Senate.

Shoats to have psychiatric test

CARLISLE (AP) — A Cumberland County Court judge ordered a psychiatric examination yesterday for convicted killer Russell Shoats after Shoats reportedly lunged at his attorney during a courtroom proceeding.

Shoats, 34, is charged with escaping from the Huntingdon State Correctional Institute in September 1977. He eluded authorities for over two weeks after allegedly kidnapping a prison guard and living on supplies stolen from southwestern Pennsylvania homes.

His trial was moved here on a change of venue.

The specific charges against him include kidnapping, robbery, theft by unlawful taking, assault by a life prisoner, riot, reckless endangerment and unlawful escape.

Prior to the start of jury selection,

Shoats reportedly lunged at his attorney, Paul Gettleman, grabbing at the lawyer's side before he was subdued by court marshals.

Shoats was serving a life term for the 1970 shooting death of a policeman.
