

Sociology professor Eloise Snyder participated in the panel discussion of a proposed Women's Studies option last night.

Women Studies option discussed

By MICKEY EDWARDS
Daily Collegian Staff Writer

A panel discussion on a proposed Women's Studies Option was presented last night by the Women's Studies "ad hoc" Information Committee.

The discussion, attended by about 35 students and faculty members, focused on the national history of Women's Studies programs and the proposal's progress "through the maze of approvals that will be necessary if such a program is to exist here at Penn State," according to a committee statement.

The proposal would establish a 21-credit interdisciplinary non-major option within the College of the Liberal Arts. The program could be combined with any major.

The option's classes would be drawn initially from existing University courses with a major focus on women, as well as supportive courses on related topics.

In 1973, an introductory women's study course, Liberal Arts 200, was offered, initiated by sociology professor Eloise Snyder and several consultants. Since then, courses related to women have been developed in the English, journalism, psychology and speech communication departments.

Snyder said she "discerned the makings of a program" in the development of these and other University courses related to women.

"Some people were pretty irritated with us. Some said we were three years too late, others three years too early," Snyder said of the early efforts to get a program started.

Snyder drafted an option proposal which was discussed and revised with students and faculty interested in women's studies. The revised proposal is now before the Curricular Affairs Committee of the College of the Liberal Arts.

If approved there, it will go before other faculty and administrative committees during a lengthy review process.

Snyder said the committees have a "right and duty to critically review" the proposal, and that organizers "have the right and duty to respond."

The proposal's backers intend to monitor the review process, and make public modifications and objections to the plan, Snyder said.

History professor Isabel Knight said that if the proposal reaches the Faculty Senate level by June, the option could be a reality by Fall Term.

French Professor Christiane Makward said that as of 1977, there were 176 college women's programs nationwide, about half of which had structured programs leading to a degree or certificate. Of these, 60 offered bachelor's degrees, 16 master's degrees, and two Ph.D.'s in women's studies.

County commissioners implementing election law

The Centre County Board of Commissioners has appointed a supervisor to coordinate the County Board of Elections' implementation of Act 171, the campaign finance disclosure law.

John Brutzman of State College is to devise a system for accounting of candidates' reports. The candidates "must certify that they have been instructed as to procedure" for the disclosures, Brutzman said. He expects to have a system prepared shortly.

Brutzman is to make status reports 10 days prior to the coming election, thirty days afterward and on January 31, 1980 if funds remain. He will also provide information to prospective candidates.

Brutzman was previously with the office of former Congressman Joseph S. Ammerman.

In other action Tuesday, the commissioners requested that all architects interested in submitting proposals for a regional juvenile detention facility send a letter of intent to the Youth Services System - in Bellefonte's Willowbank Building no later than February 21.

USG exec council revises its letter to Oswald

A letter suggesting structural changes for the Student Advisory Board to be sent to University President John W. Oswald will be revised, the Undergraduate Student Government Executive Council decided last night.

The revision will consist of a paragraph added to the beginning of the letter clarifying the make-up of the SAB.

The letter also proposes that the SAB meet the second Thursday of each month.

The council also decided it would have a brain-storming session on possible structural changes to the USG Senate.

"This is something I've been thinking about all year," Molly New, president of the Senate, said.
