

Farr: gender identity key Roles may be problem

by STACY KRUSCH
Daily Collegian Staff Writer

"The most severe kinds of problems in our society are those of gender identity," Jo-Ann Hunter Farr said in a speech Friday sponsored by the Homophiles of Penn State.

Farr, a clinical psychologist, defined gender identity as the private experience of one's gender role.

"Problems in gender identity can start as young as 4 and 5 years old, while some encounter problems even after they already have been married," Farr said. A person with a gender identity conflict does not feel comfortable in his or her body, she said.

"A person like this has one body, but psychologically they experience themselves as the other sex," Farr said. "Sometimes there is a reason, so in some may prove successful," Farr said. It provides the physiological changes necessary to make the body agree with how the person feels, she said.

"This alternative is usually extremely expensive, but for some it may be the only alternative, she said.

"There is long term and extensive psychotherapy prior to this type of surgery. No one does it just for kicks.

"After the surgery there still are problems. Problems with family and friends are some of the most common. There is also the need for counseling because of frequent severe depression," Farr said.

"Hope for the future is that research will go on in hope that the success of these operations will become even greater than it is now," she said.

Rep. to revise legislation for renovations

By PHILIP GUTIS
Daily Collegian Staff Writer

State Rep. Greg Cunningham, R-Centre Region, has said he will be introducing revised legislation to provide the University with $2 million to fund federally required building renovations for handicapped persons.

Cunningham said that when he was getting ready to introduce his original amendment to provide the University with $1.5 million, he ran into opposition from the chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, Richard McClatchy, R-Montgomery County, and the governor's office.

A problem arose with standardization of the figures that had been submitted to Cunningham and the figures the state-owned schools had provided to the governor, he said.

The Federal Handicapped Access bill, recently enacted by Congress, requires public buildings, and especially campuses of educational institutions, to renovate buildings to accommodate handicapped persons, Cunningham said.

The original amendment and the new legislation are necessary because, for some unknown reason, the state-related universities were not included in the original bill, Cunningham said.

However, the state should also be required to fund the renovations to the state-related universities because buildings on those campuses are also owned by the General State Authority, he said.

"It is important, in light of the fact that the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania owns these buildings, that the Commonwealth help defray the costs of making these renovations," Cunningham said.

A meeting with the state-related universities and engineers from the Department of Education has been set up to decide on the amount of money needed to complete the renovations, he said.

Cunningham said he plans to introduce a separate bill which will provide the funding for the state-related universities, once figures agreeable to the Department of Education are determined.

The figures on which Cunningham based his last amendment were estimates provided by the schools, which have now been re-evaluated.

Penn State would require $2 million, Pitt $1.1 million, Temple $790,000 and Lincoln $350,000 to comply with the federal legislation, he said.

These figures were determined by the schools and are subject to change.

Police list possible arson as cause of apartment fire

About 30 residents evacuated their three-story apartment building at 754 W. Whitehall Rd. when a basement fire caused heavy smoke early Sunday morning, Dave Hamilton of the Alpha Fire Company said.

The State College Police Department, which listed the possible cause of the fire as arson, said that the fire is under investigation.

Alpha firefighters responded to the call at 2:30 a.m. and remained at the scene for one and a half hours, Hamilton said.

The residents evacuated the building when a house alarm system went off. No one was inside when the firefighters arrived, he said.

No injuries were reported and the residents were allowed back in the building about 10:30 a.m. The smoke caused moderate damage, he said.

University Police Services also extinguished two fires early Sunday. University police, who suspect the cause of both fires to be arson, is continuing investigation.

At about 1 a.m. a dry evergreen branch was lit and thrown on the porch of the University Golf Shop near the White Golf Course, University police reported. Alpha Fire Company was called but the call was cancelled before the firefighters arrived at the scene, Hamilton said.

A second fire occurred when curtains were ignited in the television room on the ground floor of Snyder Hall, University police said. The fire spread to the ceiling tiles before police extinguished it at 3:30 a.m.

University police said the extent of the damage caused by both fires was unknown.
