

Khomeini summons Iranian officials

By United Press International
Ayatollah Rholah Khomeini summoned virtually every major politician from his president on down in separate audiences yesterday to discuss the future of Iran under its new prime minister, Mohammad Ali Rajai.

At the same time, President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr was reported to have lashed out again at the fundamentalists who forced him to accept Rajai, an Islamic hard-liner.

Although Rajai's selection brought Parliament a step closer to its long-awaited hostage debate, the fate of the Americans remained in the background of a political struggle that Bani-Sadr was still waging despite losing the fight over the choice of a prime minister.

For the 52 American hostages, it was day 283 in captivity.

Reports from Tehran said Bani-Sadr told a rally at a mosque Monday to beware of "the partisans of Islamic despotism who wish to monopolize power" — an unnamed but unmistakable reference to the fundamentalists who control Parliament and who dictated the choice of Rajai, a former education minister, over the objections of Bani-Sadr, who favored a more moderate candidate.

Khomeini summoned Bani-Sadr and Rajai to separate meetings to discuss the appointment of a Cabinet and other matters related to governing Iran now that the last piece of the post-revolutionary power structure has been put into place with Rajai's overwhelming endorsement by Parliament Monday.

Beheshti is widely regarded as the most powerful man in Iran after Khomeini himself, a position bolstered by his success in forcing Bani-Sadr to accept a fundamentalist.

Carter calls for no more proliferation

GENEVA, Switzerland (UPI) — President Carter warned yesterday the emergence of more nuclear powers would increase the danger of atomic war and urged adherence to the 1970 non-proliferation treaty for a "safer, saner" world.

In a message to a month-long U.N.-sponsored conference reviewing the non-proliferation treaty, Carter promised the United States will continue to share peaceful nuclear technology with nations renouncing nuclear weapons.

But he emphasized the pact, so far signed and ratified by 114 nations, is vital if there is to be "a safer, saner and more secure world."

Carter's message was read to the conference by U.S. negotiator Ralph Earle II who said he deplored the failure of several crucially-located nations to sign the pact.

The United States and the Soviet Union have agreed there should be no cooperation on peaceful nuclear energy development with countries rejecting the non-proliferation treaty.

Other nations which have failed to adhere to the pact include Brazil, Argentina, India, Pakistan and Egypt.

USG prepares freshman roster

"Fresh Start," a directory of freshman to be compiled by the Undergraduate Student Government containing information about each new student will be distributed this fall, USG President Joe Healey said last night.

The publication will contain the name, photograph, campus address, telephone number, home town, high school and major of each new student who participates.

Letters are being sent to the approximately 4300 freshmen, including those who are currently at the University, USG business manager Tim Noonan said.

All of the letters are being sent to the students at their home addresses, said Tammy Conrad (1st-business), coordinator of the project.

Each new student is asked to send a photograph of himself, and to fill out a data card containing information to be used in the directory.

The purchase price of $5 is also asked of those who wish to obtain a copy of "Fresh Start."

Unlike directories at other universities which are prepared by outside businesses, "Fresh Start" will be compiled by students, Healey said.

Healey said that a similar directory, prepared commercially would cost $2 more than "Fresh Start."

"Students can learn from doing it themselves," he said. "This is going to be open to any student who wants to get involved in it."

Many of the students working on the project are freshmen themselves.

"It's exciting for us because we're new here, too," Stephanie Dobis (1st-engineering) said.

In addition to a directory of new students, "Fresh Start" will have a 32-page section containing important phone numbers, a campus map, a schedule of athletic events and information about organizations on campus, Noonan said.

Healey said the directory is unique in that it is a project of both the Business and the Projects and Services departments of USG. He said he hopes it will help to add continuity to the organization.

Anyone who is interested in participating in the project or has questions about the directory should call USG at 863-0295.
