STOCKHOLM, Sweden (UPI) - Czeslaw Milosz, a Lithuanian-born poet "driven out of paradise," won the 1980 Nobel Prize for literature yesterday. The 69-year-old Milosz, a naturalized American and a California resident since 1960, was born in the Lithuanian village of Vilna which became part of Poland in

He was the ninth U.S. citizen — and third writer in Polish — to win the literature prize. y of California at Berkeley for 20 years, Milosz is mar-

Milosz's poetry was applauded by shipyard workers Like the 1979 literature laureate, Odysseus Elytis of Greece, Milosz was active in the anti-Nazi resistance and wrote a volume of poems called "Invincible Song"

Milosz's cultural roots are similar to those of Isaac Bashevis Singer, the 1978 literature laureate, and he is related to the French poet Oscar V. de L. Milosz. He served with the Polish diplomatic corps between 1946 and 1950 in Washington and Paris. He joined th foreign service partially to avoid censorship. He was accepted in Poland's intellectual elite but denounced Stalinist rule in 1951 when he moved to Paris. In 1953 he published "The Captive Mind," a work sharply critical of Stalinism and East European

While in Paris he translated a number of works including some by T.S. Eliot, Walt Whitman, Carl Sandburg and Pablo Neruda. He wrote for the Paris-based Polish emigrant publishing house Instytut Literacki.

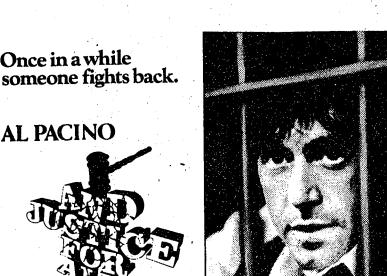

He has been translated into English and German and considers himself a difficult poet. The Academy said his Lithuanian heritage is vividly portrayed in his 1955 poetic work "The Valley of Issa." Milosz won the 1953 Prix Litteraire Europeen for his first work published in French, La Prise Du Pouvoir. He was awarded the Polish P.E.N. Club's 1974 award for his translation of poetry and most recently the International Books Abroad-Neustadt prize.

Bigfoot sighting awes Kentucky residents

MAYSVILLE, Ky. (UPI) - Anna Mae creature, Saunders, still awed by the sight of effect. "Bigfoot," said yesterday she does not want another look at the 7-foot creature covered with long, white hair she is certain she saw last weekend outside the home of her son-in-law in rural Mason

"I just hope that thing doesn't come back," said Saunders, 60. "I never saw anything like it in my life. It just looked like a big white, fuzzy thing standing there on the porch. I never saw it's face: it was above the 7-foot-high door," she said. Saunders' son-in-law, Charles Fulton, when he opened the door, but either dropped or threw it as it jumped off the as having long, white hair with "glowing animal-like eyes." Fulton, 39, went out-

said the creature had one of his roosters about the sighting because he feared no one would believe him. Saunders and the three children said they also saw the side and saw it standing between the creature was a bear because of its house and an outbuilding. He fired two upright position, and said it definitely shots with a .22-caliber pistol at the was not a man in costume.
