

Former ETS official opposes legislation

By JOE GRACE
Daily Collegian Staff Writer

The truth-in-testing legislation being considered in Pennsylvania and other states is "bad," and would eventually cause a rise in test costs, said the former president of the Educational Testing Service.

"The consumer will get the bill eventually for all these test disclosures," said William W. Turnbull, who resigned Friday from the 89,000-a-year post he held since 1970 to work more actively in test development.

Turnbull said his administrative responsibilities as president of ETS hindered his testing research.

"I haven't had a chance to work in testing research as much as I'd like," Turnbull said. "I want to work for the development of tests that don't just test standard knowledge, but rather help measure people's talents and abilities."

The $100 million testing service, which administers the Scholastic Aptitude Test, Law School Admissions Test and Graduate Record Examinations Test, among others, opposes the controversial truth-in-testing legislation currently being considered in 20 states.

Pennsylvania's testing bill, to be considered during the next legislative session, would require testing agencies to disclose copies of most standardized tests along with a correct answer sheet and the student's actual answer sheet, he said.

"In general, this kind of legislation is bad for everyone," Turnbull said. "The New York testing bill experience proved that out."

The New York state legislature passed a truth-in-testing bill in late 1979 after protracted public hearings. Turnbull said many testing programs there have had to be discontinued because of the increased costs of test production.

"The idea that all test content must be disclosed immediately resulted in the cutting out of many New York tests," Turnbull said.

"They were being forced to create test forms for some specialized tests, like the GRE, many times a year. It was just too difficult, and too high a volume of information was being given away."

Specialized achievement tests and certain graduate tests were later excluded in an amendment to the New York bill. Pennsylvania's proposed legislation contains similar test exemptions.

Fraternity holds haunted house for charity

By DANA BRENNAN

The Alpha Chi Rho fraternity, 425 Leucht Lane, will sponsor its fifth annual Haunted Crow House this week starting tonight and continuing through Saturday to benefit Strawberry Fields — an organization which helps retarded citizens.

In the past, the fraternity has helped raise money for Multiple Sclerosis and the American Heart Association. Jim Keiser, publicity director for the fraternity said, last year the fraternity raised $2,500; this year's goal is to raise $3,000.

Every Halloween Alpha Chi Rho, nicknamed Crow House, turns its house into a haven of ghosts, goblins and ghouls. Besides trying to scare visitors, the cast of characters will perform several skits.

Keiser said the house will be complete with the usual eerie special effects — he said. The Haunted Crow House has become a popular Halloween tradition among University students, said Dave Kitzmiller (7th electrical engineering) who has gone through the house the past two years.

"It's run very well; they keep it very orderly. A lot of people from the community came — not just students," Kitzmiller said.

Most students who have taken the tour said that it was, indeed, very scary.

"I thought it was great. I was really scared. You think your friend is next to you but it's someone else. Every horror movie ever made is packed into that house."

Marg Suarez (4th-business) said, "I thought it was great. I was really scared. You think your friend is next to you but it's someone else. Every horror movie ever made is packed into that house."

The cost of the tour is $1 for adults and 50 cents for children 14 years of age and under.

Visitors will be guided through the house this year rather than walking through the house alone as in the past, Keiser said.

"Last year people were getting lost and lines got kind of long. This year we're trying to make it move smoother,"

TEAM UP WITH FLUOR AND DOUBLE YOUR CAREER POTENTIAL!

In many ways, college prepares you to think independently. That's a great quality for an engineer to have. But just as important is the ability to work effectively on a team. We've found that the results of team work are much, much greater than the sum of the parts. That's why Fluor, one of the country's largest and leading engineering and construction firms, is organized totally around the team concept.

As a new engineer you'll be assigned to a project that matches your abilities and interests. You'll stay with the project from start to finish, all the while developing new skills and polishing your ability to contribute as a task force member. We think the approach makes you more capable of independent creativity, not less. At the same time you're in the perfect position to learn from more experienced professionals who come from many disciplines. For the new graduate in particular, that is a productive place to be.

So if you're thinking about your potential in the job market, why not think about doubling it? Let us tell you more about the Fluor team and about the great safety, full benefits and advancement potential that make us a top Fortune 500 company. We will be interviewing on campus Friday, November 7, 1980 for the following disciplines:

- Mechanical Engineering
- Electrical Engineering
- Civil Engineering
- Chemical Engineering
