

Scholarship pageant winner objects to prejudices

Barbara Ann Brignola

By JOHN M. RAFAZZ
Daily Collegian Staff Writer

Barbara Ann Brignola (7th-English) resents people criticizing scholarship pageants by calling them beauty pageants.

And she has a good reason. Brignola won the Miss Central Pennsylvania Scholarship pageant on March 21 in Hollisburg.

"It's not a beauty pageant, it's a scholarship pageant," Brignola said. "And all of the contestants are usually in school and want to continue their education."

Brignola received a $1,000 scholarship for winning.

She said found prejudices against the pageants when the contestants were asked to sell advertising to merchants to support the contest.

"I was told by a few owners of the stores (in State College) that they refuse to support a sexist beauty pageant. And so I would just look at them and smile and say, 'Well, you have a right to your opinion, and walk out.'"

By winning the pageant, Brignola becomes one of 20 state women who will compete in the Miss Pennsylvania Scholarship Pageant in June. The winner will travel to Atlantic City in September for the Miss America Pageant.

Brignola, 22, is a native of Bala-Cynwyd, a suburb of Philadelphia. She has an associate degree in science from the Hahnemann College of Allied Health Professions and has worked for a year as the head nurse at a suburban Philadelphia rehabilitation center.

She left nursing because she wanted to pursue her interests in acting and dancing, she said.

"I just felt my education wasn't complete. It's not like I'm getting out of nursing. I just happen to have two careers — two interests. My goals have changed now."

She also said the atmosphere here is artificial.

"I don't ever see anyone under 20 or over 20. You just see kids all the time. And I like variety. It's like a Mickey Mouse world."

"And personally, I don't think that coming to a school like this in this little 'fake' world prepares you for going out and getting a job and facing the realities of today's society."

Brignola said she never felt sexually exploited in any part of the pageant — not even during the swimsuit competition.

"It is just a minor part of the competition and I think all of the contestants are pretty uneasy about that part of it. You're being judged on how you look in that swimsuit."

She pretended she was modeling the swimsuit to get over the feeling that she was being judged on how she looked in it, Brignola said.

But she was advised by a theater arts faculty member that she had so much experience in undergraduate theater subjects that she would waste her time being a theater major.

Brignola said she has been having trouble adjusting to the University and State College.

"Everything — it's very laid back. And I'm used to the hustle and the bustle and everything moving fast and the city. It's not hectic up here at all and I'm still like that. And I'm still a very jumpy person. I don't know if I'll ever be able to change into this."

Man slips in parking stall, injures foot

Robert Basalla, 1445 Westley Parkway, was injured on Friday when his brother, John J. Basalla, of the same address, backed his car into a parking stall on 105 Gerald St., the State College Police Department said.

Police said Robert Basalla was walking too closely to his brother's car as it was being backed up.

A car driven by Michael Stroempfer, Iyland, collided on Saturday with a car driven by Harry Taylor, Berkshire, as Stroempfer was driving north on South Garner Street, State College police said.

Stroempfer turned left into Taylor's path, police said.

Police estimated the damage to Stroempfer's car at $500 and damage to Taylor's car at $200.

Arthur S. Dervaes, professor of military science, told University Police Services on Saturday the fiberglass roof on his car was damaged while it was parked in Orange Parking Lot D. Police estimated the damage to the roof at $200.

Edward Kyler, assistant housing supervisor, told University police on Friday that a door was pryed open on a vending machine in the lobby of Milfin Hall and coins were removed. Police estimated the value of the coins and damage to the machine at $125.

University police said yesterday that a plexiglass sign was removed on Saturday from the Beaver Stadium scoreboard. Police said a 12-foot section of the sign was removed and the sign was broken in half. The value of the sign is unknown at this time, police said.

Robert Basalla slipped and fell under the front wheel, twisting his left foot, police said.

He was taken to Centre Community Hospital where he was treated for an injured foot and released, a hospital spokeswoman said yesterday.

While riding his motorcycle on Friday, James Broucher (3rd-business administration) moved across the northbound lane on University Drive and collided with a guardrail, State College police said.

Broucher told police that as he was traveling south on University Drive, he applied his brakes and they failed. Police said Broucher skidded and came to a stop at the guardrail.

Police estimated the damage to the motorcycle at $500.

UNIVERSITY CONCERT COMMITTEE

John McLaughlin—Al DiMeola—Paco DeLucio

In anticipation of the upcoming concert in Eisenhower Auditorium, The University Concert Committee would like to once again remind its audience of the importance of abiding by University fire and safety regulations.

Eisenhower Auditorium is an exceptionally fine facility and provides an excellent setting for concerts. However, because some persons in past audiences have not exercised good judgment by refraining from smoking, consuming alcoholic beverages, and lighting matches, the Concert Committee has found it necessary to restrict the type of show it will present in the Auditorium. Tuesday evening's concert should be excellent, and the Committee asks your full cooperation so that we may again utilize the Auditorium—one of the finest concert halls in Pennsylvania.

Thank You and Enjoy,
The Concert Committee

College of Engineering gets new dean

By DIANNE GARVANTES
Daily Collegian Staff Writer

Wilbur L. Meier Jr., head of the School of Industrial Engineering at Purdue University, was named dean of the University's College of Engineering, a statement released by University President John W. Oswald announced last week.

Meier will replace Dean Nunzio J. Palladino on July 1, the statement said.

At the time of the announcement, Oswald indicated that final ratification of the appointment will be made at the May meeting of University Board of Trustees, University Public Information said.

George J. McMurtry, associate dean for instruction in the college, said Palladino requested an early retirement from his post about a year ago.

Palladino will become a professor of nuclear engineering and is writing a book on that subject, he said.

Palladino has been dean of the College of Engineering since 1966. He has been with the University since 1959.

Meier said he was pleased with his new appointment.

"I'm very pleased and very excited about it," Meier said in a telephone interview last week. "It's a great opportunity."

"Penn State is and has been one of the major engineering institutions in the United States," Meier said.

Meier said though he has not had time to look at the college in detail, he does have a few ideas.

"An obvious objective is to build up undergraduate research," he said. "I think it will strongly develop the undergraduate program and will contribute to undergraduate courses."

"I'll one look at the Penn State engineering program and makes a comparative analysis with other leading schools in the country," he said, "one is immediately struck by the high number of undergraduates with a relatively small undergraduate research program."

Meier said because there is a growing demand for engineers, the number of undergraduates in the college has been increasing over the past several years.

To facilitate this growth, Meier said something should be done to either limit enrollment or expand the facilities. Meier said expanding undergraduate facilities would necessitate obtaining funds, but he said he does not anticipate any problems in that area.

At Purdue, Meier increased externally funded research from $281,000 to more than $1.2 million under his leadership. Provost Edward D. Eddy said at the time of the announcement.

McMurtry said the groundwork for a fund-raising drive for the college has already been laid by Palladino. The funds would be raised through industries, alumnae and friends, he said.

Meier said he does not anticipate any difficulties with the switch from Purdue to the University.

"The student population at Purdue is 30,000, roughly the same as that of University Park, which has about 33,000. Meier said Purdue is on a semester system now, so there will be no problem with the conversion to the system here.

Both McMurtry and Edward H. Klevas, associate dean for research in the College of Engineering, said they were pleased with Meier's appointment.

"There will undoubtedly be changes because each dean has his own style and his own goals," McMurtry said.

Klevas said, "We've always had tremendous stability in this college."
