CFA battle just the thing to awaken NCAA

Don't believe those prophets of doom who've been warning about the death of the NCAA and even college football as we know it today.

Tom Verducci

Penn State football coach and athletic director Joe Paterno, a leading spokesman for the CFA, said he was disappointed with the vote because it would be a commitment by the CFA to challenge the NCAA.

Bob Devaney, athletic director at Nebraska, said he was disgusted.

"We lost out at Atlanta," said the one-time coaching great. "At that CFA conference, it seemed too many people were not informed. Thirty-three to 20 is not really a strong vote."

"Our conference (Big Eight) voted 6-3 in favor. We got back to a meeting on Wednesday and if we had a vote, you'd be lucky if you got a 4-4 vote."

Maybe the CFA needs Lech Walesa, but even without him, the potential for solidarity is there. The CFA membership includes all of the heavyweights in college football except the teams in the Pacific 10 and Big Ten conferences. Penn State, Nebraska, Notre Dame and Alabama are also among the 61 CFA members.

The next test of solidarity for the CFA was to come this Thursday, the deadline for members to request their votes. But it appears as if the CFA has decided to punt and see what the NCAA does with the ball. Both the Big Eight and the Atlantic Coast Conference announced they will not sign either television pact until the NCAA convenes to discuss the realignment of big-time football.

The top Division I-A schools believe all college football programs are not created equally and thus should not share equally in such things as voting power and television revenues.

Bob James is commissioner of the ACC and a believer in realignment.

"If you look at the membership of the CFA," James said, "they contribute much to the NCAA financially, administratively and legislatively — a most significant contribution. And it might not be wrong to say that these schools probably hold the present organization together."

"The NCAA doesn't even argue over the need for realignment."

"In general, they have a valid argument in the attempts made to organize the football-playing membership," said Thomas Hansen, assistant executive director of the NCAA.

"So why the fuss? The two sides should get together and form a Super Division. Of the 137 Division I-A schools, include in it most of the 61 CFA members and the Pac-10 and Big Ten members. This group would be free to negotiate its own television packages and establish tighter legislation for recruiting and academic standards. Yet it would still share a percentage of revenues with the NCAA and still adhere to that organization's official rules and regulations of the game."

But nothing with the NCAA comes that easily. The NCAA is a balding, near-sighted and pot-bellied old man shuffling his feet through a field of cow manure but smiling as if everything was fine. Yet we all know that what the NCAA is in, stinks.

In a time when the very nature of collegiate sport came under public attack in the light of scandals and schemes, the NCAA went after the Auburn and Oklahoma States while the self-confessed forgers of the Pac-10 schools went untouched. So it should come as no surprise that when the NCAA finds itself gasping for its bureaucratic life, it tries to choke itself with red tape.

The CFA wants realignment now. The NCAA's next scheduled convention is Jan. 11-13 in Houston. A special meeting is in order, but as Hansen said, "There is one technical problem."

The NCAA has a 60-day deadline for submission of legislation and probably couldn't convene until December, and since Jan. 11 is right around that corner, Please see CFA, Page 9

Lions shoot down Redmen, 2-0, but search for goalie continues

By JEFF SCHULER

Daily Collegian Sports Writer

When a team takes 52 shots on goal and holds its opponent to just 12, the coach of that team shouldn't have to worry about the game's outcome.

But for almost 74 minutes of last night's soccer match between the Lions and St. John's, Penn State coach Walt Bahr stood silently as his team held a precarious 1-0 lead, despite the obvious statistical edge his Lions had over the stubborn Redmen.

It was not until sophomore Jeff Maierhofer scored an insurance goal at 73:50 to seal the Lions' 2-0 victory at rainy Jeffrey Field, that Bahr finally felt secure.

"If St. John's was a little better than I thought they'd be. We had some excellent opportunities; we played well, moved the ball well, and, for the most part, controlled the game."

"If we make one mistake (with a one-goal lead), they're right back in the game," Janczewski said. "We missed a lot of chances; it should have been a lot worse."

The unexpectedly close margin prevented Bahr from doing some experimenting in his search for a replacement for graduated goalie Angelo Nickas. Freshman Dave Wilson started in goal last night, and Bahr had hoped he would be able to switch to freshman Greg Kenney in the second half. But the one-goal margin at halftime ended Bahr's hopes of getting Kenney in.

"It wouldn't be fair to either one," Bahr said. "Not to Dave, who built his confidence in the first half, and not to Greg, who would have had to come in cold."

Wilson played credibly last night, making nine saves on the 12 shots he faced. But, by the same measure, he wasn't really tested by any difficult shots.

"We're playing well," Janczewski said, "but we just have to start putting the ball in the net more. We need some consistency with each shot."

"I'll find out what kind of keepers we have when we are on the opposite end of a game like tonight's."

But imagining a team — ANY team — getting 52 shots on Penn State is a bit hard. This was the second straight shutout for the Lions, and part of the reason Wilson wasn't tested was the play of the Lion back line of Bill McDonald, Lou Karbieren, Dan Cantler and Greg Dennis.

"We're playing well," Janczewski said, "but we just have to start putting the ball in the net more. We need some consistency with each shot."

"That's the way it is in soccer," Bahr said. "You can dominate and dominate and dominate and not put the ball in the goal. Having control of the game and scoring are two different things."

"Sometimes you get three shots and score on two; then there are times like tonight."

CORNER KICKS: Bahr wouldn't say who would be the starting goalie for Friday's game with Loyola. "I'll depend on practice," he said. "Wilson played 66 minutes of Friday's 6-0 whitewash of West Virginia Wesleyan, with Kenney playing the other 24. Ballo Morrison scored a pair of goals to lead the Lions in that game. St. John's record fell to 0-2, while the Lions moved to 2-0."

His only crucial miscues were allowing shots by Penn State's Peter Janczewski and Jeff Maierhofer to slip in through the back door.

"Their keeper was outstanding," Lion coach Walt Bahr said. "He didn't make a mistake all night. He did a nice job covering and cutting off the shots."

On countless occasions, Penn State's front line weaved through Redmen territory, only to be thwarted by a stingy defense that forced the Lions to fire errant shots beyond McCormack's reach.

Granted, the wet field helped contribute to the Lions' inability to convert many scoring opportunities, but McCormack said the Redmen back line, consisting of defenders Andreas Christouliou, Robert Moratti and Neville Green, made

St. John's Irish luck helps limit booters to 2 goals

Forget all that stuff about the men's soccer team having such offensive punch this season that it would easily overwhelm St. John's last night at Jeffrey Field. But then again, the Redmen possessed a little luck of the Irish in keeping away Penn State goals.

When it was all over, the Lions had captured their second victory of the young season, 2-0, in the first meeting ever between the two schools. But St. John's junior co-captain Tom McCormack, the Redmen's starting goalkeeper, captured the lion's share of the credit for the last three seasons, was hardly disappointed.

The native of Dublin, Ireland, garnered 19 saves and turned in 52 shutouts on goal in damp, slippery conditions.

McCormack was covering, everybody was tackling," McCormack said. "Our team is totally defensive. I thought Penn State would have given us a lot more pressure."

"Our back line held out very strong. The back line was like the difference between a 50 percent effort against Navy (who defeated the Redmen 2-1 last Wednesday) and a 100 percent effort tonight. Fitness-wise, we could have gone into overtime."

As it turned out, the Redmen never got close to the thought of overtime because they rarely tested Lion freshman goalkeeper Dave Wilson, the heir-apparent to the departed Angelo Nickas.

Instead, much of the crowd's attention was directed toward the dihard efforts of McCormack.

"They came to play us tough, and they really did play us tough," said Lion forward Lou Karbieren, who had two shots-on-goal wiped out by the St. John's defense.

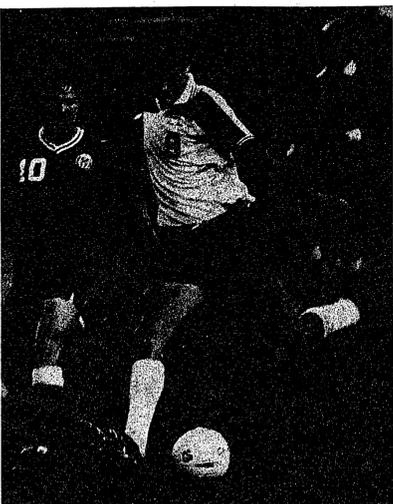

"Their team really has been improving, and he (McCormack) played an excellent game."

McCormack has been turning in excellent games ever since he became a starter as a freshman. Although the Redmen sported only a 7-3 record last season, McCormack recorded two shutouts and 64 saves in 10 games.

And considering that McCormack said Penn State is one of the Redmen's toughest opponents this season, grabbing 19 saves and surrendering only two goals is all in a good night's work.

"Penn State has a lot of shooting power," McCormack said. "But they were taking too many long shots."

Either that or McCormack was stopping them.

Center forward Pete Janczewski (9) scored the first goal for the men's soccer team last night in the Lions' 2-0 win over St. John's at Jeffrey Field.

CFA, NCAA need each other and television monies

It would like to wait instead of wasting money at a special convention.

The next important dates on the NCAA calendar are Sept. 28 and 29. They're reserved for a meeting of the chief executive officers — one from each conference and the major independents.

Realignment should provide the most lively discussion. In the meantime, the realignment issue is "not on hold, it's under study," according to Hansen. A subcommittee of the NCAA Committee on Governance met last week to look at the problem, and the entire committee meets today.

The CFA's intentions behind the restructuring are basically honorable ones.

"We're interested in the governance issue," said Gene Corrigan, Notre Dame athletic director. "The NCAA is totally wrong in saying they have exclusive rights to cable TV and even regular TV. And we're interested in beefing up academic requirements. We're concerned with getting integrity back into football."

The CFA can make better strides to ward integrity than the NCAA. That's because it is a smaller organization (61 members as opposed to 660), and coaches and athletic directors have greater involvement. Paterno and Maryland's Jerry Claiborne have been mavericks in the fight for integrity since the CFA formed in 1977.

"That's the great thing about the CFA," ACC commissioner James said. "Coaches can get involved. The NCAA is so big you can't get lost."

Although its officials like to downplay it, the CFA is in this for the money, too. Although the total package would be worth less money than the NCAA's television deal, the CFA schools figure to make more money. How much more is not clear, especially since cable television could mean megabucks. Corrigan of Notre Dame said last week it is "not a significant amount."

Paterno said on Aug. 23 the CFA package "won't make the rich get richer" and the schools "won't get much more than we would have taken in from the NCAA package."

Exactly a week before that, Paterno said Notre Dame could make $1.2 million more over the next two years with the CFA package.

The CFA schools preach of integrity and fairness, but their breath smells of greed. It's a different kind of greed, though. Selfishness is needed for survival now that big-time college football is becoming bigger-time.

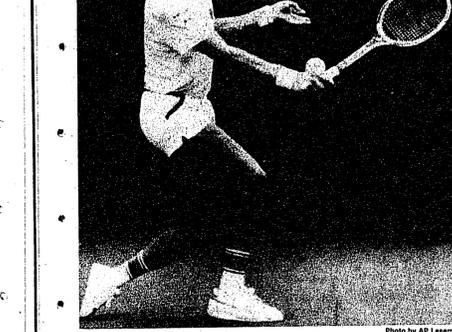

"Athletics are a business now because we've been placed in that financial position," James said. "With inflation and other factors, we have not been able to fund athletics like we used to. If you can finance it, you can have it."

Nebraska's Devaney said: "College football has to be big to compete for the dollar to keep the program going."

And what happens if competing for the dollar means having to sign a television contract with NBC? Will the NCAA really kick out Penn State and the other dissenters?

"There is no question that any institution that remains in the NBC package is a compromise — through realignment and compromise — the two are strong enough to defend themselves against the mounting problems in college football."

Vitas Gerulaitis upset third-seeded Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia 6-3, 6-4, 3-6, 6-4 at the U.S. Open tennis championships Tuesday. The win advances Gerulaitis to the quarterfinals.

Upsetting: Lendl, Clerc, Shriver defeated at U.S. Open

By BOB GREENE

AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Flamboyant Vitas Gerulaitis and unheralded Duk Manson knocked off two of the tournament's top seeds yesterday to advance to the quarterfinals of the U.S. Open tennis championships.

Gerulaitis, seeded 15th, regained his composure in the fifth set after showing anger at an earlier foot-fault call and eliminated third-seeded Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia 6-3, 6-4, 3-6, 6-4.

Manson ousted No. 5 Jose Luis Clerc of Argentina 6-3, 7-6, 6-3.

Manson, who will play Gerulaitis in the quarterfinals, had advanced to the fourth round of the National Tennis Center in Flushing Meadows by upsetting No. 11 Peter McNamara on Saturday.

In another upset, Anne Smith eliminated eighth-seeded Pam Shriver 6-4, 1-6, 7-5.

The tournament's top seeds and defending singles champions, John McEnroe and Chris Evert Lloyd, easily moved to the quarterfinals.

McEnroe stopped Kevin Curren of South Africa 7-5, 6-0, 6-1, while Lloyd crushed No. 12 Bettina Bunge of West Germany 6-2, 6-0.

In other matches, No. 4 Martina Navratilova defeated Kathy Jordan 6-0, 6-1; No. 5 Hana Mandlikova demolished Duk Manson 6-0, 6-1; No. 6 Sylvia Hanika of West Germany eliminated Sharon Walsh 6-2, 7-5 and surprising Barbara Gerken, a high school senior from Thousand Oaks, Calif., defeated Jo Durie 7-6, 6-1.

No. 3 Tracy Austin advanced easily, defeating Rosie Casals 6-1, 6-3, and Barbara Potter, seeded No. 11, avoided the tide of upsets by defeating amateur Andrea Leand 6-7, 7-6, 6-3. Leand had ousted second-seeded Andrea Jaeger in the second round.

Playing his best tennis in more than a year, Gerulaitis rose to the occasion to capture the first two sets. Then came the foot-fault call in the sixth game of the third set.

The two had traded service breaks, and Gerulaitis was one point away from moving ahead in a 3-3 tie, leading 40-love. The call visibly upset Gerulaitis.

On the next serve, Lendl hit a winner and Gerulaitis slammed the ball in the direction of the woman who made the foot-fault call. The ball went into the stands and struck a man in the face, although it did not injure him.

Immediately following the match, Gerulaitis was fined $750 by the Grand Prix supervisors for the incident.

The Grand Prix supervisors said Lendl jumped on Gerulaitis' next serve, hitting a winner down on him, and the Czechoslovakian put the next service return at Gerulaitis' feet, pulling to deuce.

Lendl passed Gerulaitis for the advantage, then broke serve when Gerulaitis netted a volley to take a 4-2 lead. Lendl served a low game for a 5-2 advantage, then won the set on his next serve.

Gerulaitis finally pulled himself together in the fifth set, recording the only break in the seventh game. Lendl, the top men's seed to fall, was eliminated when, at deuce in the 10th game, he returned a serve wide and then netted a backhand.

Gerulaitis failed to show up at a press interview after the match, telling a press room assistant, "I'm going to get groceries."

He then stepped into the yellow Rolls Royce and left the site of America's premiere tennis event.

The Grand Prix supervisors said they would meet later to determine the amount of the fine that will be levied against Gerulaitis for not attending the press conference.

"I think he served a lot better than I put a lot more pressure on him and kept the ball in play."

"I think he thought there would be easier points for him to win," McEnroe added.

Smith said her victory was "my biggest singles win." Asked if it put her in the running to capture the title here, she said: "You bet it does."

Lendl said the crowd, which was rooting for Gerulaitis, helped the New Yorker.

"Definitely it makes it easier to play when the crowd is behind you," the Czechoslovakian said.

McEnroe breezed to his latest victory in a bid to win his third consecutive U.S. Open singles title, a feat that hasn't been accomplished since Bill Tilden did it in the 1920s.

The left-hander, who defeated Bjorn Borg to win Wimbledon in July, never lost his serve.

He broke Curren in the 12th game of the first set, and the South African could hold his own serve only once more, in the fourth game of the third set.

"The other time I played him (Curren) was Wimbledon, and it was a close match," McEnroe said.

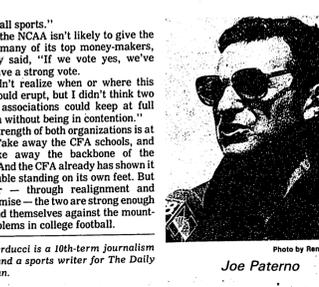

Smith said her victory was "my biggest singles win." Asked if it put her in the running to capture the title here, she said: "You bet it does."

Air Coryell bombs Browns, 44-14

By BRUCE LOWITT

AP Sports Writer

CLEVELAND (AP) — Dan Fouts completed 19 of 25 passes for 330 yards and three touchdowns in a near-record performance and Chuck Muncie rushed for 161 yards and a score last night as the San Diego Chargers buried the Cleveland Browns 44-14.

Fouts, who shattered his own National Football League single-season passing record in 1980 with 4,715, completed 15 consecutive passes in one stretch, a club record and within two of the league mark, established by Baltimore's Bert Jones on Dec. 15, 1974, against the New York Jets.

In that span were three-quarter touch-down passes of 13 yards to rookie running back James Brooks and 4 yards to veteran back Hank Bauer. Fouts also conpleted a club-record 31 passes on 57 attempts for 475 yards, including touchdowns of 18 yards to Ricky Feacher in the second quarter and 4 yards to Greg Pruitt in the third quarter. Sipe was also intercepted twice, the only two turnovers of the game.

Rolf Benirschke kicked field goals of 50, 43 and 33 yards to complete the scoring for the Chargers before a Municipal Stadium crowd of 78,004. That crowd put the NFL's season-opening weekend total at 866,789, surpassing the league's first-weekend record of 837,755, set two years ago.

The game was only 41:10 old when the Chargers took the lead on Brooks' run, capped by Fouts' 16-yard pass to Dwight Joiner for 19 yards on the next play of the second period.

But just 2:38 later, the Chargers opened up the score to 17-0 on Muncie's run two plays after he had danced around for 19 yards on the Cleveland defense for 17 yards.

Title IX suit by soccer club still in limbo

By KAIA K. SMITH

Daily Collegian Sports Writer

It is indeed true that all good things come to those who wait, then maybe the women's soccer club should sit back and be patient while it waits for the results of the federal investigation into Title IX.

The club filed the suit with the federal Office of Civil Rights because the University has a varsity soccer team for men but not for women. Correcting inequalities like that, in effect, is the reason for the existence of Title IX. The law states that male and female athletes should receive equal treatment in all aspects of athletics.

Nine of the club's 14 games this year are against varsity teams, including four Eastern Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women tournament teams.

"We're a varsity group, we play varsity teams," Conley said. "We have more good players than we've ever had before."

But playing like a varsity team and playing other varsity teams do not constitute varsity status, and until they do, the team will have to wait. Conley, however, can't wait forever.

"I can't keep doing it (coaching) indefinitely," he said. "This would have to be my last year. I'd hate to leave without it being resolved, though, because it's fun."

"We're still trying to get this settled here on campus. I'd much rather drop the whole thing. There's some movement toward getting it solved, but it could take years."

Once the investigation begins, it must go through state and federal levels. The University would probably appeal if the investigation ruled in the team's favor, but it could also get involved in litigation, all of which would prolong the process indefinitely, Conley said.

The team opens its season Sept. 15 at George Washington as a soccer club. Maybe it will close its season two months later as a varsity team.
