Wrestlers look to pin tourney foes

By LEE DEORIO
Daily Collegian Sports Writer

While most of us will be home preparing to gobble down our Thanksgiving feast, the Penn State wrestling team is hoping it will be able to gobble down a few tough opponents.

The Lions will travel to the East Stroudsburg Open Tournament and the Bloomsburg Invitational Nov. 21-22. Head coach Rich Lorenzo has given his wrestlers the option of participating in either tournament so they may be as close to home as possible.

No matter what tournament the wrestlers chose they won't be dealing with a bunch of turkeys.

The East Stroudsburg Open will feature more than 20 squads including Maryland, LSU, Temple and Rider. A pair of conference rivals, Bloomsburg and Clarion, along with national power Virginia, will be among the top teams at Bloomsburg.

The two tournaments will be a good tune-up for the Lions' first dual meet on Dec. 3 at Rec Hall against Cornell.

"These two tournaments will give us a good idea of what we need to work on and concentrate on for the upcoming season," Lorenzo said. "They will also allow our younger wrestlers to get some experience and give them a chance to work in competition against new faces instead of the same old ones they see everyday in practice."

"These are good early-season tournaments that will give us the opportunity to wrestle against some fine competition. Our main concern is to stay injury free."

Penn State did not stay injury free in its last tournament. Sophomore Jeff Rosenberger suffered a knee injury in an experimental rules match in Stillwater, Okla. Rosenberger, who underwent successful knee surgery, will be lost to the team for six weeks.

Despite the team's inexperience and Rosenberger's mishap, the Lions still have a strong team and even have an opportunity to top last year's team, which placed sixth at nationals.

"We have pretty good balance in all 10 weight divisions," Lorenzo said. "Balance-wise, this is one of the strongest teams we've had in the last four years."

A good deal of that balance will be provided by underclassmen. Lorenzo said as many as six or seven freshmen and sophomores should see plenty of action. One of the top sophomores is Carl DeStefanis in the 118-pound division.

"Carl is the guy who gets us started," Lorenzo said. "He is a very intense and aggressive wrestler who stirs up a lot of action."

Lorenzo said juniors Billy Marino (at 134 pounds) and Joel Johnson (190) are also crucial to the squad's success. Then there is senior co-captain John Hanrahan who finished third in the nation last year at 167 pounds.

"We expect John to be the pace setter for our team," Lorenzo said. "His experience will be valuable to the others."

But one of the keys to the season is how well the younger wrestlers can perform.

"Our inexperience will show up more in the tournaments than in the dual meets," Lorenzo said. "The young men will have to adjust to tournament play. It's all part of a learning process."

The learning process will begin shortly in East Stroudsburg and Bloomsburg where the Lions hope to knock the stuffings out of a few opponents.

State fencers to hone skills at Temple Open

While most Penn State students are taking a vacation during term break, members of the men's and women's fencing teams will be hard at work. They will be sharpening their skills individually and in team practices in preparation for the Temple Open Nov. 21-22 in Philadelphia.

The Lady Lions, coming off a good showing at the Penn State Open, will attend eight fencers to the tournament. Hanne Skatlehol, second in the Open; April Miller, fourth, and Donna Perin, sixth, have all entered the Temple tournament.

Lady Lion coach Beth Alphin said she expects more tough competition, especially with Yale and Pennsylvania's top fencer, Chris Bocca, competing.

"There will be a heavy number of New York and New Jersey schools entered," Alphin said. "We saw that we were backed in our own section. Now we'll see how we stack up with the Eastern schools."

In December, the Lady Lions will fence mostly in individual competitions, with the only team meet to be against the Penn State alumni Dec. 5. After that, the Penn State team will travel to the Michel Azeaux Open on Dec. 12 at Hunter College.

Lion coach Mac Garret asked his team to concentrate on final exams, but to be ready for the Temple Open. Garret said 15 fencers have entered, led by Marty Simowitz, who placed second in epee at the Penn State Open.

Also fencing in epee will be Mike Corina and Mike Murphy. Team captain Stu Rothenberg leads a contingent of three foil fencers, while sabre fencers Joe Hayes, Paul Wharton and four others hoping to improve on last week's showing. None of the Lion sabre fencers made the finals in the Penn State Open.

After the Temple Open, the Lions face George Mason and Duke in a home tri-meet Dec. 5.

"George Mason will be very tough," Garret said. "Alex Tom, who finished second in foil at the Penn State Open, leads a very fine team. Last year we only beat them 14-12. A score that close can go either way."

Dick Harter

Rebounding is a question mark Lion cagers without a true center to dominate boards

Editor's Note: This is the second of a two-part series previewing the 1981-82 men's basketball team. Today: A look at the personnel and the start of the season.

Daily Collegian Sports Writer

Frank Brickowski is gone — but whether any one can replace him is open to debate.

Some people are relieved that last year's 6-10 center and leading scorer (19 points per game) for the men's basketball team graduated. Others are bemoaning the loss of the height, the muscleman and the second-leading rebounder (6.3) of the Lions.

Some say the Lions can do without his leadership qualities, or lack thereof, but his height and muscle could be sorely missed. Without Brickowski, the Lions are without a true center and only one good rebounder — 6-8 Mike Lang, who led the team last year with eight rebounds per game. That's the one major weakness the Lions are trying to compensate for this season.

"We probably don't have another rebounder besides Mike Lang," Penn State coach Dick Harter said. "We need more rebounding. We have a lot of people who can pass the ball and do things we don't have one such person who can get 10 rebounds night-in and night-out to go with Mike Lang's 10."

"That's not a putdown of anyone else's ability. But we need someone to get six or eight a game we hope can go with Lang's."

Lang is listed as a forward-center on the team's roster, along with 6-10 sophomore Dick Mumma.

But Harter and his staff have been stressing the fact in the preseason that everyone will have to go to the boards. It's something the players realize, too.

"It's really important that everybody knows we all have to go to the boards," 6-7 forward Rich Fetter said. "Mike Lang does an excellent job going for the rebound, and guys like (6-5 forward) Brian Dean, myself, David Griffin and Tom McCluskey (all 6-7 forwards) realize we have to go to the boards. It's all mental. We have to get it in our minds we have to do it."

Helping the Lions out with their offensive rebounding is the fact that Harter said this team is an better shooting team than last year's.

"And I don't know why," Harter said, "because we don't have Brick."

Brickowski set a school record for field goal percentage last year on a team that had only one other player — Fetter — average in double figures for the season. Harter said the Lions still also don't have one person who can get 20 points a game consistently. But this year they do have more of a variety of shooters, guard and co-captain Mike Edelman said.

"Especially since Richie's back up front (at forward)," Edelman said. "Tommy McCluskey and Brian Dean both have a good touch, and with Dickie Mumma up front, once he gets more confidence, he can shoot the 15-footers."

Both Fetter, a junior, and Dean, a sophomore, are back at forward this year; Dean after being shuttled between guard and forward as a freshman last year and Fetter after being unsuccessful in moving to guard last year after playing forward as a freshman.

"The big thing for us," Harter said, "is to win all these games. After Indiana State, which was one of the top four Division II teams in the country last year, we play as good a team later on in the year but not on the road as much."

"So from that point, December is the most difficult month of the season."

Concerning the LION and it's red shoed friend, Alicia.

While officials pondered — and the righteous majority with its sightless authority, waxed and waned on just what to do — Playboy, of course, published it.

Anyway, for those of you who collect trivia (albeit unique) we now proudly unveil Alicia and the Lion No. 2. And to maintain tradition and derring do — this creation was also made at the same place on a chilly evening two weeks ago.

Mind you, these are not cheaply made posters but totally hand made colour photographs, exquisitely matted, and hardly inexpensive at twenty-nine fifty.

A marvelous gift for both the faint of heart and — of course — for those who would fantasize. Something a woman would give her Penn State father — or if she feels secure, her boyfriend — lover, or both.

Anyway, do come and browse in our small friendly studio-gallery and note the many non-Lion photographs.

It could become you!
