

Dorm makes calendar to aid cancer society

By CHRIS KAY

Fraternities and sororities are not the only organizations that sponsor philanthropies — residence hall houses are also getting into the act.

Rivaling the growing number of calendars featuring the men and women of Penn State, the fourth and fifth floors of Pennypacker, in cooperation with Coca-Cola, are helping support the American Cancer Society with their man-covered poster-calendar. The poster sells for $1.50.

"It's a great idea to have a philanthropy in the dorms, just to show that the greek organizations aren't the only groups that can raise money for charity," said Andrea Granoff, Resident Assistant for Franklin House.

The house's women liked the idea of a calendar in light of the ones featuring the University's women and because they thought it would be fun to produce, Granoff said.

Members of Franklin House were told to be on the lookout for guys, she said. The men were chosen very informally.

"If we saw someone we liked, we went up to them and asked them if they would like to be on our calendar," Granoff said.

Fifteen men were sent to photographer Jay C. Mastalerz, who took the photos for the calendar. Franklin House then voted for 11 individual pictures and one group picture, she said.

The women were very pleased with the final product, said fifth floor resident Susan Smith.

"I think we did a good job picking out guys," Smith (3rd-liberal arts) said. "The calendar looks good and people are interested."

It also proved to be a good activity for Franklin House, said fifth floor resident Mary Jane Seader.

"We put a lot of work into the calendar," Seader (3rd-business administration) said. "It brought the floors closer and hopefully it will be a success."

The 11 men on the calendar are all University students. They volunteered their time and were selected based on their physical attraction and personal grooming.

"I knew one of the girls in the house," said Mike Fekete, "and when they asked me to be on the poster I said yes because I thought it would be fun."

"I didn't look as bad as I thought I would," Fekete (2nd-science) said. "The guys that were in there were incredible."

Pete Greene, another student on the calendar, said he had a good time doing the poster but also was kidded for it.

"When a few girls came up to me and asked me to have my picture taken for the poster I thought it would be a lot of fun, and I was honored," Greene (2nd-pre-law) said. "I had my picture taken at the pool and the lifeguards and everybody there were really laughing."

GSA approves constitution of new group

The Graduate Student Association approved the constitution of the Chinese Fellowship Association at last night's GSA meeting.

The new organization will represent graduate and undergraduate students from China and will, according to its constitution, "attempt to present the culture of the Chinese, providing a cultural exchange in between its members and the public."

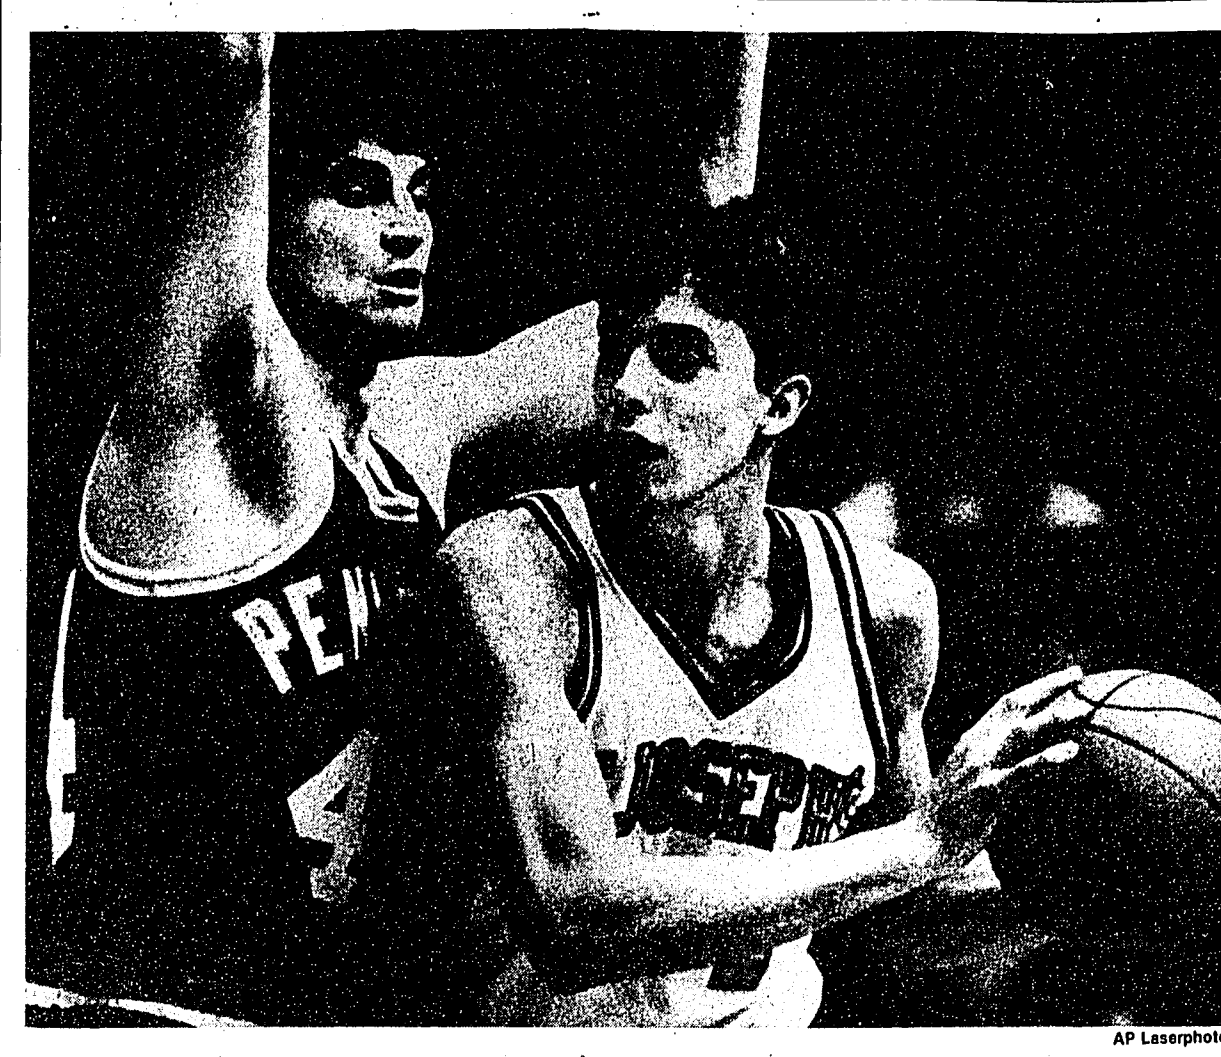

The group will represent mainland China, however, and not Taiwan.

Kitty McHugh (graduate-agricultural economics) said the group's next step will be to send a letter of approval to the Association of Student Activities so funds may be allocated and a meeting room may be found.

The Chinese Fellowship Association will be under the direction of the Graduate Student Association if any discrepancies occur, McHugh said.

Lions' depth beats Hawks

By PAUL ALEXANDER
Collegian Sports Writer

The men's basketball team did something last night that it wasn't supposed to do — win.

The Lions, led by 6-6 forward David Griffin's career high 22 points, handed the Hawks of St. Joseph's a 78-69 loss at the Palestra in Philadelphia in front of 4,291 vocal fans.

It was clutch free throw shooting by freshman guard Alex Agudio in the final 23 seconds that preserved the win for the Lions. After the Hawks had cut Penn State's 15-point lead to five, 72-67, St. Joe's was forced to foul and the freshman was the obvious choice.

Agudio canned both, to give the Lions a seven point lead and then Griffin made good on two more free throws to ice Penn State's first Atlantic 10 Conference game.

"Agudio hit the two big foul shots of the game," Penn State Head Coach Dick Harter said. "I thought he played good defense — putting his nose in — going after the basketball. He made some really great basketball plays."

It was Penn State's first conference game since 1977, when it was in the Eastern Eight, and now the Atlantic 10. And it was also the first time since 1973 that the Lions have won in Philadelphia.

The game opened with Griffin and the Hawks trading hoops. Then it was guard Dwight Gibson hitting from the corner for two. On the next Lion possession, he canned a three-point field goal to give the Lions a three point lead, a lead that was never relinquished throughout the contest.

"Dave (Griffin) just came out blazing," Harter said. "He played with that confidence and poise that you need to get started in a tough place to play against a good team. Dave was the answer for us in the first 10 minutes of the game."

If the Lions didn't prove enough in their triple overtime loss to the 11th ranked Alabama, they certainly proved last night how tough they are when they don their blue away uniforms. Penn State, 5-1 on the year, is 2-0 when on the road knocking off Maryland and now St. Joseph's, who finished with a 25-5 record and an NCAA tournament berth last year.

"We played very well," Harter said. "All things considered, this was our best ball game. I know for 20 minutes of the time we were really playing well."

Griffin, who finished with 22 points, was also hit with two relatively foul fouls, and his replacement, 6-11 Dick Mumma picked up three fouls before the half.

The Hawks were led in scoring by Lonnie McFarlan. The pure shooting forward finished with a game high 23 points, including two three-pointers. Forward Bob Lojowski scored 14 points for St. Joe's.

The Lions were without the services of their leading scorer Tom McCluskey, who suffered a sprained knee against Alabama. Rich Fetter was his replacement and finished with nine points, but one of the keys for Penn State was its depth.

Winning in the Cheyney gym, which has a high school atmosphere and a women's basketball team with top college ability, is not an easy task. It's more like an impossible task for teams in the last four years.

No one has beaten the Lady Wolves in four years in their own gym. That's right — no one.

Penn State was no exception to the rule Cheyney Coach Vivian Strimling established at home last year when the Lady Lions lost to Cheyney 78-70.

Portland said in the beginning of the season that her players knew what to expect by playing Cheyney in a home and away series during the season.

"We understood everything when we put them on our schedule," Portland said. "It is an early indicator for us and we are very optimistic."

Bear Bryant to resign today

By HERSHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK — Alabama's Paul "Bear" Bryant, whose teams have won more games than any coach in the history of college football, will announce his retirement today, The AP learned last night.

The 63-year-old coach will be succeeded by Ray Perkins, coach of the NFL's New York Giants, informed sources said.

Efforts to reach both Bryant and Perkins were unsuccessful, but sources close to both men confirmed rumors that had been circulating throughout the day on several fronts. Joint announcements reportedly will be made Wednesday in Tuscaloosa, Ala., and at Giants Stadium in East Rutherford, N.J.

The 41-year-old Perkins, in his fourth year as coach of the Giants, was a star receiver at Alabama under Bryant in 1964-65. The Mount Olive, Miss., native went into coaching after playing five years with the Baltimore Colts of the NFL.

He served as an assistant coach at Mississippi State University and in the NFL with the New England Patriots and San Diego Chargers before becoming head coach of the Giants in 1979. Last year, he led the Giants to the playoffs for the first time in 18 years.

The sources said Bryant would coach Alabama through the Crimson Tide's Liberty Bowl game with Illinois on Dec. 29, while Perkins will remain with the Giants until the end of the NFL season.

Alabama's 7-4 record this season is its poorest since a 6-5-1 mark in 1970. In addition, Bryant reportedly has found recruiting getting more difficult since he cannot promise prospects that he will coach them for four years. Although Bryant can legally coach until he reaches the age of 70, attempts to circumvent the mandatory retirement law for state employees have been rebuffed.

In 38 years as a head coach at Maryland, Kentucky, Texas A&M and Alabama, Bryant's teams have won 322 games, lost 85 and tied 17. He has been the head coach at Alabama for 25 years, compiling a mark of 231-46-9.

The AP learned that the University of Alabama had formed a small search committee to pursue a successor in the event Bryant decided to retire. Bryant talked with Perkins last week when he was in New York for the National Football Foundation's annual Hall of Fame banquet, but did not offer him the job because he thought it would mean a salary cut.

However, Perkins subsequently got word to Bryant that he wanted the job in any event.

Bryant's wife, Mary Harmon Bryant, said the coach was not recruiting and expressed surprise at the news.

"I'll believe it when I hear it," she said. Later, she added, "Anything you hear tomorrow (Wednesday) may not be exactly as you heard it (Tuesday night)." Bessley Reese, Giants defensive back, said none of the players knew of the reported move by Perkins, and added, "It is definitely a shock to me. I never expected it. If it's true, I'm disappointed. But a man has got to do what he's got to do."

Mrs. Bryant may have been referring to another rumor that Perkins would serve under Bryant for a year — perhaps as offensive coordinator — and assume the reins in 1984.

Dr. Josh L. Thomas, president of the University of Alabama, refused to confirm or deny the rumor of Bryant's impending retirement.

"I wish I could help you, but I can't confirm anything at this stage," Thomas said.

Asked if he could deny the report, Thomas said, "I can't deny it."

Then he added, "I don't have enough data yet," but declined to elaborate on that remark.

Lady cagers set for the road

By GREG LODER
Collegian Sports Writer

Playing the next two games away for the women's basketball team is kind of like nails on a chalkboard, a paper cut and kissing your sister. It's just something you don't enjoy.

Penn State will play an Atlantic 10 game against feisty St. Joseph's at 6 p.m. tonight in Philadelphia and then travel tomorrow to West Chester to face No. 10 Cheyney State.

Neither game is going to be easy for the Lady Lions, especially due to the fact that both are being played on unfriendly courts.

Penn State (4-1) is coming off a disappointing loss to Missouri in the finals of the Mid-Atlantic Tournament on Sunday, and dropped four spots to No. 16 in national polls.

Lady Lions' starting center Cheryl Ellison doesn't think the loss is that important this early in the season.

"It depends on how you look at the rankings," Ellison said. "Rankings are not important until the end of the season."

Penn State Coach Rene Portland said there is a lot of pressure off the team after the first loss of the season.

"(The loss) takes the monkey off your back for the undefeated season," Portland said. "Everryone played a bad game and we tried every possible combination."

But in order for Penn State to stay close to the top 20, the Lady Lions will have to fare well in both back-to-back games. . .an State cannot look past St. Joseph's towards the higher-ranked Cheyney.

Portland said playing these two games in two nights is easier than the tournament in the midwest the Lions had to play this season.

"We know more about these two teams," Portland said. "The team is more mentally ready."

The first nuisance for Penn State will be the Lady Hawks, who are led by 5-8 senior Carol Polacek averaging 15.1 points a game.

Portland said there is no trouble getting up for a Philadelphia based team like St. Joseph's. "They are a Big 5 team," Portland said, "and anytime you play a Big 5 team, it is like five on zero. Anytime one of those teams comes close, they all celebrate."

There will be another added incentive for both teams in the game. Portland began her collegiate coaching career in 1976-77 with St. Joseph's, before moving to Colorado for two years and then coming to Penn State.

And if that isn't enough incentive for the Lady Lions, the next night against Cheyney offers even more.

Winning in the Cheyney gym, which has a high school atmosphere and a women's basketball team with top college ability, is not an easy task. It's more like an impossible task for teams in the last four years.

No one has beaten the Lady Wolves in four years in their own gym. That's right — no one.

Phillies obtain veteran Morgan

By RALPH BERNSTEIN
AP Sports Writer

PHILADELPHIA — The Philadelphia Phillies filled holes at second base and in the bullpen yesterday when they obtained infielder Joe Morgan and reliever Al Holland from the San Francisco Giants.

Morgan, 30, was a former Cincinnati teammate, Pete Rose, 42, an age combination that could affect one of the strongest defensive teams in the league.

Morgan hit .289 for the Giants last year and was a key figure in the team's stretch drive for the NL West title that fell just short of the champion Atlanta Braves and runner-up Los Angeles Dodgers. He hit 14 home runs and had 61 RBI in 120 games. He also stole 24 bases.

Holland, 30, compiled a 7-3 record with a 3.33 ERA and five saves. He has a four-year career record of 19-11, a 2.60 ERA, and one save. The Phillies view the hard throwing lefthander as a late inning stopper.

Krukow, 30, came to the Phillies last year when it was believed that he would be traded to the Chicago Cubs. He posted a 13-11 record with a 3.12 ERA. Davis, 22, has been plagued with shoulder problems, and was 5-12 with a 6.12 ERA at Oklahoma City last season.

Feniger, 19, was the Phillies No. 2 pick in the June 1981 draft.

Phillies president Bill Giles said Morgan, who had reached a salary impasse with the Giants, was given a two-year contract, the first year guaranteed. It was believed Morgan got close to the $600,000 per season he was seeking from San Francisco.

Giles said the deal was made at baseball's winter meetings in Hawaii last week, but could not be announced until contract problems were settled with Morgan.

In San Francisco, Giants general manager Manny Trillo to the Cleveland Indians for young outfielder Von Hayes, a promising lefthand hitter.

Giles said the Phillies' brass decided after last season that they had to have a lefthand hitter to balance a predominantly right-handed batting lineup, and needed a help in the bullpen.

"Our head major league talent evaluator, Hugh Alexander, said Holland is one of the top four relievers in the National League," Giles said.

Morgan, an 18-year veteran, said over a telephone hookup that he felt capable of playing every game. He explained that his contract problems with the Giants were based on too many "ifs" and he wanted his money guaranteed.

"There were too many clauses on 'if I did this or did that,' and I didn't see any reason for that and refused to sign," Morgan said.

Morgan 39, will play alongside former Cincinnati teammate, Pete Rose, 42, an age combination that could affect one of the strongest defensive teams in the league.
