

Super Bowl sites set

By CHARLES RICHARDS
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS — NFL owners yesterday selected Stanford Stadium in the San Francisco suburb of Palo Alto for Super Bowl XIX in 1985 and the Louisiana Superdome in New Orleans for Super Bowl XX in 1986.

The 1985 play date is Jan. 20 and the 1986 date is Jan. 25.

"There was a suggestion that we go to Houston in 1987, but we did not pick beyond 1986 at this time," said NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle. "We will go beyond that within a year probably, picking for 1987 and afterwards."

The 1983 Super Bowl will be played Jan. 30 in the Rose Bowl in Pasadena, Calif., with Super Bowl XVIII in 1984 set for Tampa Stadium, home of the Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

Other cities which placed bids at the last league meeting last June were Miami; Anaheim, Calif.; Pontiac, Mich.; Seattle; and Jacksonville, Fla.

The owners also decided on the time and date of the National Football Conference and American Football Conference championship games.

Rozelle said the NFC title game will be played Saturday, Jan. 22 at 1 p.m. or 5 p.m. EST depending on the site.

The AFC championship game will follow at 1 p.m. or 5 p.m. EST the next day, Sunday, Jan. 23.

Steelers bring Malone back, cut Moser

By ALAN ROBINSON
AP Sports Writer

PITTSBURGH — The Pittsburgh Steelers yesterday activated injury-plagued quarterback Terry Bradshaw for the final two games of the 1981 season, and waived veteran special teams player Rick Moser.

Malone, the Steelers' first round draft choice from Arizona State in 1980, has been practicing since last week and the Steelers had until Wednesday to notify the National Football League office whether he would be activated this season.

Malone has been on the physically unable to perform list with a nagging knee problem.

"He's not there yet," Steelers Coach Chuck Noll said of Malone's physical status. "But he's been improving."

Malone has not played in either a pre-season or regular season game this year.

As a rookie, Malone played in one game as a wide receiver. He was pressed into action last season as a wide receiver when the Steelers had injury problems and caught a team-record 90-yard touchdown pass in a 23-20 loss to Seattle.

After starting quarterback Terry Bradshaw and back-up Cliff Stoudt were injured, Malone stepped into the starting quarterback's job and played in season-ending losses to Cincinnati and Houston. He completed 45 of 88 passing attempts for 553 yards, three touchdowns and five interceptions and nearly rallied the Steelers to an upset victory over the Bengals.

Pittsburgh quarterback Terry Bradshaw (left), who was benched in last weekend's 13-0 shutout loss to Buffalo, will now have another backup in Mark Malone. The injury-plagued Malone was activated yesterday to the Steelers' roster.

Malone underwent surgery on his right knee last January.

Moser, 25, was originally signed by the Steelers as a free agent from Rhode Island in 1978. He was a reserve running back and special teams player until being released late in the 1980 season, when he was picked up by the Miami Dolphins.

Moser was let go by the Dolphins in 1981 and was acquired by Kansas City, but was later released by the Chiefs. He then resigned with the Steelers.

The Steelers resume full-scale work Wednesday for their game Sunday in Cleveland against the Browns.

Pittsburgh will be coming off a 13-0 loss to the Buffalo Bills that was their second shutout defeat in three weeks and dropped their record to 4-2.

The Browns lead the all-time series between the two rivals, 37-27.

Phillies giving away large package for mediocre Hayes

Outfielder not worth the 2 starters and 2 prospects given up to Cleveland by Owens

What have the Phillies done? Manny Trillo for Von Hayes — great! George Yovovich and Trillo for Hayes — well okay. But Trillo, Yovovich, Julio Franco, Jay Ballew and minor leaguer Gerry Willard for Hayes — you've got to be kidding.

Don't get me wrong, I think Hayes is an excellent prospect who, at 24, could give the Phillies many good years. His 14 home runs, 82 runs batted in and 82 stolen bases are impressive stats for a first-year player, but are they so good that the Phillies can afford to exchange two starters and two promising players for the outfielder?

When you look up second baseman in the dictionary there is a picture of Manny Trillo beside it. He played 89 consecutive games without an error and gets to balls that other infielders can't turn their gloves at. No one can throw the double-play like Trillo and his stellar play will be missed by the Philadelphia faithful.

Trillo's contract, which runs out at the end of the 1983 season, is a big part in this deal. The Indians are hoping they can sign the all-star, who will probably ask for $1 million. That's a big risk. But if Manny declines to stay with the Tribe, they still have three ex-Phillies to make the deal a success.

The Phillies are in a tougher position. If Hayes does not become a solid contributor in right field, general manager Paul Owens will take a lot of heat and might face the possibility of watching the players he dealt have successful careers in the American League.

Yovovich was plagued with the most disease a talented ballplayer can get — platoonitis. He was never able to get into any groove while he was with the Phillies and as a result had to shake the rust off his bat in the two or three games he'd play in a week. If given a chance to play every day in Cleveland, he could surprise the Indians' fans who thought they got the raw end of the deal.

Franco was touted as the second coming of Larry Bowa with one exception. Franco could hit. This past season at Oklahoma City he hit .300 while hitting 21 home runs and knocking in 66 rbi's. Those look like Bowa's career marks.

Ballew was the Phils' only young pitching prospect. Without him, their farm staffs are made up of retirees, has-beens and those who never will.

Plain and simple the Phils gave up too much for Hayes. Don't blame Cleveland for the trade.

The fault lies with the Philadelphia brass. Since the World Series, Phillies' general manager Paul Owens let everyone know how badly he wanted Hayes. That was his mistake. If Owens would have kept his exuberance towards Hayes to himself, the price tag for the young man back to haunt the Phils if he can stay healthy for an extended period of time.

The new look Phils should be a contender in the Eastern Division in 1983, but one can't help remembering the last time the ball club did this much juggling with its starting lineup. That was 1979 when they signed Pete Rose, traded for Trillo, finished in fourth place and fired Danny Ozark. Not an optimistic precedent.

With Krukow gone, look for another trade which should bring a starting pitcher to Philadelphia. How about Garry Maddox for Britt Burns or Steve Trout of the White Sox. However, with the way things are going don't be surprised if a Maddox for Gaylord Perry deal materializes.
