

Softball team splits with Lady Owls

The softball team managed one win and one loss against Temple in a double-header yesterday on Lady Lion Field. Penn State defeated the Owls 2-0 in the first game and lost the second game 7-3.

Second baseman Pam Mowery scored the first run of the first game and third baseman Geri Sava tallied the second for the Lady Lions in the bottom of the sixth inning.

"The game was won in the first inning," Temple Coach Ronnie Maurek said of the first game. "Penn State jumped out right in the beginning."

Rankin said the Lady Lions were really up for today's game because of the Lady Owls' (8-5) are No. 1 in the Atlantic 10, and she was pleased with the team's performance.

"We hit well," Rankin said. "We were more aggressive than in the past. We played well defensively, even though Temple had people on the bases a lot of the time it didn't seem to shake them."

Temple Coach Ronnie Maurek said the Owls were not effective offensively in the first game.

"It was a tough loss," Maurek said. "The 2-0 loss seemed like 20-0. We got runners on base but they didn't do anything."

In the second game, however, the Lady Lions were a bit down. They had three hits in the second inning but were unable to capitalize on any more hits during the rest of the game. "We had great catches and great plays," Rankin said. "But we need to be consistent."

A notable performance in yesterday's games came from two pre-game for Penn State. Kent, who has a knee injury, hit a triple and a double in the second game and played outstanding right outfield.

"Cheryl played super in both games," Rankin said.

Laxers meet No. 8 Rutgers

Things won't be any easier for the men's lacrosse team at 1:30 tomorrow afternoon when the Lions take on the Scarlet Knights in Rutgers Stadium.

"It's one of our oldest and most intense rivalries," Thiel said. "It's our most emotional game every year."

The game is made all the more interesting by the fact that Rutgers is coached by Tommy Hayes, a former Penn State great who played for the Lions in the 60's.

On the field, Rutgers is led by mid-fielder Albert Ray, a graduate student who played tailback for the Scarlet Knights' football team.

"He's a great athlete," said Thiel. "He dominates play in the mid-field and we'll have to neutralize him."

Rutgers runs a fairly patient offense and plays tough defense, a combination that enabled the Scarlet Knights to topple the Lions 11-3 last year.

"They play a control-type offense, passing the ball around and waiting for the defense to make a mistake," Schmitt said. "They did that last year and were successful."

Thiel hopes that the Lions can stick with the Scarlet Knights on defense and not give up any easy goals. "Defensively we can't take a lot of chances," he said. "We have to stay with our men and deny them the easy passes."

but up quite a rivalry. The games have been especially close the last three years with the Scarlet Knights winning last year and the Lions picking up one-goal wins the previous two years.

Trackmen host Nittany Lion Relays

By RICH BRADLEY
Collegian Sports Writer

The men's track team will host some of the top athletes in the country in the 12th Annual Nittany Lion Relays this weekend at the Nittany Lion Track.

"Five of the decathlon events will be at 1 this afternoon, with all other track and field events beginning at 10 a.m. tomorrow."

Although the team was impressive in last weekend's Dogwood relays, Men's Track Coach Harry Groves expects some tough competition for his squad this weekend.

"We've got a whole lot of nationals and internationalists in the meet," Groves said, "along with about 20 colleges sending teams. Some of the bigger teams are Pitt, Fairleigh-Dickenson, Bucknell, University of Toronto, and the Philadelphia Pioneer Track Club."

"These teams represent some of the best track and field competitors in the country," Groves said. "Some of the individuals competing in the meet are highly ranked in their respective events. Keystone State Games champion Eric Phillips will be competing for the Philadelphia Pioneers."

In the steeplechase race, George Malley — former American record holder — will be running against Penn State Rick Garcia. Malley, who won a Bronze medal in the World Cup, is also a former member of the Penn State track team.

Greg Fredricks, representing Club Adidas, will be running the 1,500-meter race against Penn State's Clark Haley, Mark Overheim and Jeff Adkins. Haley and Overheim both set personal records in the Dogwood Relays last weekend.

In the field events, Bob Sing, a Lion record holder, will be competing in the javelin throw against Todd Leggett, who registered his best throw of the year last weekend.

John Warner, formerly of the University of Maryland, will be competing in the pole vault against Lion Ken Stoffer. Stoffer won the Olympic development division of pole vault at Dogwood with a 15-foot vault.

"These are some big names in the meet," Groves said. "The most competitive events will be in the 800 and 1,500 races, simply because Pitt, Penn State, and Fairleigh-Dickenson have exceptional people in these events and it'll bring together a pretty solid field."

Groves said while the individual events will be highly competitive, he expects some excellent relay races to finish off Saturday afternoon.

"All these teams are good in the relays," Groves said.

Lady golfers face field of 24

By TIM EYSTER

With the benefit of playing in three previous tournaments, the women's golf team will be looking to end its winless streak Sunday morning when it tees off in the Boltermaker Spring Classic at Purdue University in West Lafayette, Ind.

Although they have been co-favorites in every tournament they've participated in this year, the Lady Lions have come up short of victory on each occasion, encountering bad weather and a lack of sharpness around the greens.

Penn State lost to William and Mary by two shots in a sudden death playoff at the William and Mary Invitational in Williamsburg, Va., battling low temperatures, high winds, and a wind chill factor which dipped as low as six degrees. During the Marshall Invitational at Huntington, W. Va., Penn State had problems with their short game, taking fourth place overall. They also took fourth place in their own Lady Lion Invitational last weekend, which was plagued by rain during the first day of play.

Penn State Head Coach Mary Kennedy said, however, playing in these three tournaments, plus the fact that they were able to get in a full week of practice during good weather, has the Lady Lions well prepared for the Boltermaker Classic.

"With three tournaments behind us, we should perform very well," Kennedy said. "With a full week to prepare, practicing the mental and physical part of the game, we

A total of 24 teams could participate in the Boltermaker Classic, which is scheduled for a total of 36 holes over Sunday and Monday.

Among the teams Penn State will face is Ohio State, who won the Lady Lion Invitational by two shots as well as the Marshall Invitational by an unbelievable 15 shots over 54 holes. The Lady Buckeyes are led by Cathy Kratzert, who has won both respective tournaments individually.

Sunday will mark the first time any member of the Penn State squad has played on the South Course at West Lafayette. The team consists of Jane Abood, Denise St. Pierre, who took third place individually at the Lady Lion Invitational, Kellie Jones, Ellen Black, and Sandy Jasko.
