

Golf team hosts Rutherford invite

By BOBBY DALE MORGAN
Collegian Sports Writer

Two weeks ago the men's golf team played in its most prestigious tournament of the year, and last week it played on the best course it will play on this season. This weekend two Penn State teams will be playing their most important tournament of the year - Penn State's own 1983 Rutherford Intercollegiate. The first annual Rutherford, (previously known as the Nittany Lion Invitational for the last nine years and named after Penn State's first golf coach Bob Rutherford), is tabbed for Penn State's Blue Course and will include 27-hole rounds on tomorrow and Sunday for the 18 teams entered. "For us to have a shot at nationals, it's almost a necessity that we win this weekend," Lion Captain Brian Corbett said. "Everyone expects you to do well on your home course and that puts so much added pressure on us this weekend." Corbett led all Penn Staters with a three-round 248 at the most recently played Ohio State Invitational, while as a team the Lions could only muster a 15th place finish. "I think this weekend is very important in regard to a possible national bid," Corbett said. "It would be great to win it, but we really have to dominate the tourney because we're playing on our home course." Tharrington burned up the Blue Course last year but faltered in the late going and had to settle for second place. "We're not playing all that well now," Corbett

Netmen set for Atlantic 10 title

Lions favored ahead of rival West Virginia

By MATT MICHAEL

The men's tennis team and West Virginia will be at each other's throats once again when they take part in the first Atlantic 10 tennis championship tournament and tomorrow at the Airport Racquet Club in Pittsburgh. The Nittany Lions (5-7) and the Mountaineers played last week in the Merchurst Quadrangular at Merchurst College and Penn State escaped with an exciting 5-4 victory. "We can't go down there thinking we are the best team," said Virgil D'Onofrio, who was voted the most outstanding player in the quadrangular. "We are not going to win the tournament unless we play hard." The Lions enjoyed their finest weekend of the season last Saturday and Sunday when they won the Merchurst Quadrangular by defeating Bloomsburg and Merchurst in a 5-4 tie. "Even if they move their lineup around just a little, it could make a big difference because it was a match that could have gone either way." "Something clicked against West Virginia," Mark Inersa said. "We finally pulled through in a close match." The Lions not only gained momentum for this weekend, but also con-

Lady golfers to end season

By TIM EVYSTER
Collegian Sports Writer

Coming off a strong showing in the Bollemer Spring Classic, the women's golf team will be looking to end its season with a victory in the Duke Invitational this weekend at Durham, N.C. The 54-hole tournament will be played today through Sunday with 18 holes scheduled for each day. When play was completed at last Sunday and Monday's tournament in West Lafayette, Ind., the Lady Lions had given one of their best performances of the year, firing a 635 total over 18 holes to finish runner-up to tournament winner Ohio State. That finish was their best effort since placing in the same position in the William and Mary Invitational in Williamsburg, Va. on March 24 and 25. Lady Lion Jane Aboud also gave her best individual performance of the season at the Bollemer Spring Classic, finishing second to Ohio State's Cathy Kratzert after a sudden death playoff. Aboud had a one-shot lead over Kratzert, after the first round, shooting a 73, and followed that effort with a second day 72. Kratzert, however, came back from a first day 74 to fire a second round 71 and force the playoff. "For Aboud and three other Lady Lions golfers, however, the fine showing at Purdue University is not the only incentive they have for doing well in the Duke Invitational. Denise St. Pierre, Ellen Black, Sandy Jaskol, and Aboud will be playing in their last collegiate tournament when they tee off this morning. The other member of the team is Junior Kellie Jones. "They're inspired since it's their last collegiate tournament, and they want to give it their best showing," Assistant Coach Sam Jensen said of the four seniors. "They're going in there with a good mental attitude, Jane, especially, with those two good rounds." Jensen also said the team was in good shape for the tournament despite the short time interval between the Bollemer and the Bollemer Classic. Head Coach Mary Kennedy will remain in State College to serve as host to the men's Rutherford Inv-

Trackwomen tune up at Rutgers

By JEFF SAUKATIS
Collegian Sports Writer

The women's track team will travel to New Brunswick, N.J. this weekend for its final tuneup before the important Penn Relays held next weekend in Philadelphia. Last week in the Nittany Lion Relays, Penn State faced its toughest competition so far this season, but Penn State Head Coach Gary Schwartz feels the Rutgers Relays, which begin today and conclude tomorrow afternoon, will provide even a tougher test for the Lady Lions. "In some respects, I think that this week's competition will be better overall," Schwartz said. "Last week there were some really outstanding matchups in certain areas, but some of the competition was a little weak in some areas." All season long Schwartz contended the team would be qualified for both the Eastern Championships and the National Collegiate Athletic Association Championships. "Natalie Udoprevic will be trying to qualify for Easterns and nationals in the 10,000 meters this week," Schwartz said. Udoprevic was supposed to run the 10,000-meter race in last weekend's Nittany Lion Relays, but the weather did not cooperate. Schwartz said he would have wanted more people to qualify for both the Eastern Championships and the Rutgers Relays. Unfortunately, the weather conditions for this week's practice also hampered some of the Penn State girls, and Schwartz said the constant climate troubles have been very nerve wracking for some team members. "One of the big concerns right now is just to keep everyone's mental attitude good," Schwartz said. "We'll get warm weather sometime, and if the kids will be patient, they'll be alright. We know that they are capable of fine performances if the conditions are right." Junior All-American Tammie Hart is still responding to treatment for a foot injury suffered last week, and she will not be able to compete this weekend. Once again, freshman sprinter Cindy Rose will be taking Hart's place in the 400-meter relay. "We don't want to take chances rushing somebody with Tammie's talent back in to competition before she is completely ready," Schwartz said. "As for the 400-meter relay, we aren't worried about it this week. Cindy Rose proved to be an able replacement last week, so I don't think we are losing much efficiency in our overall performance in the event." Rose said she does feel a little pressure replacing an All-American performer like Hart, but she says that it doesn't really effect her performance. "I already would feel a little worried anytime I wasn't participating in a relay," Rose said. "Other people are depending on me, so whenever I'm running with I want to do my best." "I'm also looking forward to running the 100 meters this week, because I falsed started out of it last weekend," Rose said. "I'd really like to qualify for Easterns this week if possible." The Rutgers meet will provide the perfect test the Lady Lions need in order to be competitive at the Penn Relays. "I look for the meet to be highly competitive for all of the girls," Schwartz said.
