

Family Health:

By BETH KAY
Collegian Staff Writer

Centre County families who have health or domestic relations problems can receive free nursing consultations from the University Nurse-Family Health Service.

Student nurses provide in-home consultations

Cohn said. "The service focuses on people taking care of themselves," she said. Services include health information, instruction and counseling based on the family's needs, interests, and concerns. Some visits help family members deal with the "generation gap" among age groups. Student nurses visit the family home for a minimum of eight one-hour sessions, which are arranged according to the students' class schedules. During the consultations, nurses learn how the family interacts and then discuss the family's major concerns. As the nurses provide assistance, the families, in turn, help the students gain practical experience. "I hope that (the nurses) get a realistic view of what the people really need and a joy of being able to provide some service," Tetraault said. "The program carries on a nursing tradition of caring for people in their natural settings, she said. Consultations are usually free but a fee may be charged when a more experienced nurse — a graduate student or registered nurse — visits. A family may also be charged if more consultation is needed. "Although money isn't exchanged, information is exchanged," Cohn said. "We think of it as families helping students learn and student nurses helping families with their health." Families who would like more information should contact the Department of Nursing at between 9 a.m. and 9 p.m. Monday through Friday at 863-2225.

Academic Assembly seeks better work relations

By ANNE McDONOUGH
Collegian Staff Writer

The goal of this year's Undergraduate Student Government's Academic Assembly is to improve the working relationship it has with the faculty and administration, said assembly president Frank Pogue. "At one time, the faculty came to the assembly for student input and I want to put us back where we belong," he said. The assembly serves as the student's representative to the University Faculty Senate concerning academic matters, said Pogue. It consists of two voting student members from each of the University's 10 colleges and five non-voting students. The assembly is now concerned with such issues as the relevance of student evaluations of professors, the use of teaching assistants and the status of the pass/fail option. An emergency meeting was called for tonight to discuss the recommen-dedation of the Undergraduate Instruction Committee of Faculty Senate to drop the pass/fail option, he said. Assembly members will be asked to survey students in their respective colleges. A cohesive assembly opinion will then be presented at the Sept. 13 Faculty Senate meeting. "Pass/fail is an important issue to students and a student opinion has got to be given," he said. The assembly also has many other goals to work on this year, Pogue said. They would like to have "Academic Awareness" bulletin boards around campus to inform students about any changes in academic policies. Also, it would like to have a book of courses that are offered, but not listed in the class schedule. The book would aid students during the drop/add period and would eliminate the problem of visiting the various department offices to determine the availability of particular courses, he said.

Retired professor dies prior to football game

Michael R. Lynch, a retired University agriculture professor, died of a heart attack as he walked into Giants Stadium on Monday night. Lynch, 66, collapsed on his way into the stadium in East Rutherford, N.J., and was taken to a hospital, where he died, said Gary Peterson, news editor of the University's Extension Service news bureau. Lynch retired as associate professor of agricultural extension and coordinator of staff development for the University's Cooperative Extension Service in 1980, after nearly 35 years of service. A native of Meyersdale, Somerset County, he received a bachelor of science degree in poultry husbandry in 1945. He joined the Cooperative Extension Service in education and went on to earn a master of science degree in educational rural sociology in 1957. Lynch was a founding member of the Mount Nittany Conservancy, an organization dedicated to preserving the natural beauty of this University landmark.
