Stansbury changes mind

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Temple University reported yesterday that guard Terence Stansbury had reconsidered and decided to accept an invitation to the United States Olympic basketball trials beginning April 17 in Bloomington, Ind.

"I have re-evaluated my position and feel that I can finish my schooling at another time," Stansbury said. "However, the Olympics are a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity and it is an opportunity which I feel I have to take advantage of."

The 6-5 senior declined the invitation last week in order to be able to complete his work for an undergraduate degree.

Spikers need consistency

Consistent this or inconsistent that, the fact is the Lions have to start putting some good volleyball together in the next couple weeks heading into the ECVL Championships, beginning tomorrow night.

Tait said the key to Rutgers-Newark is that the first time the Lions faced them, the team's No. 1 player — outside hitter Carl Pierre — had an off day. If the squad hopes to compete against Penn State, Pierre must be on.

Meanwhile, Tait and the Lions will be sporting a new starting lineup since the two teams met almost a month ago. Freshman Ole Lachenmeier is starting at middle blocker in place of freshman Todd Stehman, and junior Bob Palika has moved in to start at outside hitter, replacing sophomore John Hartruff.

And then there are the mainstays of Kaz in the middle and Hunkins on the outside, the final time they'll be seen at Rec Hall. Does Hunkins want anything special out of his home finale?

"I'd really like to go out and just beat Rutgers and give them no sign whatsoever of winning a game or even letting them in the match," he said.

"I definitely want everyone to play well and for sure I want to play well and go out with a big bang."

LION NOTES: Penn State will also compete in the Keystone Regional Championships of the United States Volleyball Association on Sunday.

earlier for the highly competitive meets it will have later in the season. On a good note, two of the best performers for the team will be back in competition at the Invitational after being sidelined with injuries.

Schwartz said Doreen Startare and Carla Crist will both compete for the Lady Lions this weekend.

Crist will be taking part in the heptathlon, a competition that involves competing in seven events — the 100-meter hurdles, 200-meter run, 200-meter run, high jump, long jump, shot put and javelin.

Trackmen warm up with Memorial Invite

The men's track and field team will host the fifth annual Memorial Invitational tomorrow starting at noon at the Nittany Lion Track.

Twelve teams will compete in this non-scoring meet used by the Lions primarily as a warm-up before going on to the larger meets and championships later in the season, Head Coach Harry Groves said.

"We're just trying to get ourselves acclimated to the outdoors," he said. "We have this meet at home partly because it prepares us for the Dogwood Relays at Tennessee next weekend." Teams from Cornell, Philadelphia Textile and Greg Fredricks and Rick Garcia also plan to compete this weekend. Fredricks was a member of the 1980 U.S. Olympic team while Garcia holds the 3,000 meter steeplechase record for the Invitational.

Groves said the meet will be non-scoring to avoid over racing any particular athlete this early in the season.

"I'd much rather have a scoring meet but I don't want to put too much pressure on individual athletes at this point in the season," he said. "I don't want to risk a scoring meet at the athlete's expense."

Lion Dwight Stephens, a senior who will compete in the 5,000 meter run, is the top distance runner for the team this year. He said this weekend presents an opportunity for the Lion athletes to find out what kind of shape they are in.

"It's the first time out, so we're just going to see how it feels," he said. "It's a chance to shake the cobwebs out and see where everyone stands."

Stephens said the meet in Tennessee next weekend will be an important one for Penn State.

Trackwomen take part in 1st scoring meet

By DEBORAH J. STEPHENS

The women's track team travels to Virginia this weekend for the George Mason Invitational. The Lady Lions will face 10-15 teams in their first scoring meet of the outdoor season.

Penn State Head Coach Gary Schwartz said this invitational was a good quality meet last year, and is hoping this year it will prove to be similar.

Although the Lady Lions will not know how many other teams they will be competing against until they arrive, they do know there will be college teams and track clubs from around the Washington D.C. area represented.

"Basically we're hoping for good competitive attitudes from our girls," Schwartz said. "We want the kids to go in and be as competitive as possible."

Schwartz said his other goal is to have some of the Lady Lions qualify for the Eastern Championship meet May 12-13.

Penn State is coming off its first outing at the Virginia Invitational last weekend, a meet that was non-scoring.

Unfortunately the weather has been a factor against Penn State's readiness for the outdoor season. The Lady Lions have been getting a "decent" workout inside, Schwartz said, but inside workouts are makeshift at best.

"We're still not getting outside much, but the kids are getting work," Schwartz said.

He added it would be nice to have a better spring to get the team ready

Golf teams go south for tournaments

Both the men's and women's golf teams are heading south this weekend in search of sunny skies and tournament victories.

The men's team will tee off today at the Marshall Invitational in Huntington, W.Va. Practice rounds will be held today, with 36 of the 54-hole tournament scheduled for tomorrow and the final round being played on Sunday.

Men's Head Coach Mary Kennedy will be missing her top golfer this weekend. Scott Gerhart re-injured his back in last weekend's match in North Carolina and will not travel with the team. Leading the Lions against the 18-team field in West Virginia will be Jim Boyle, who has the lowest stroke average (74.8) on the team.

The Lady Lions will head farther south in search of a victory, as they travel to Duke University for the Duke Invitational. A strong showing in this season opener will help the team as it prepares for the Lady Lion Invitational, which will be held April 14-15 on the University Blue Course.

Steelers, Pirates increase ticket prices

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Steelers have joined with their fellow Three Rivers Stadium tenants, the Pittsburgh Pirates, in hiking ticket prices for the 1984 season.

The Steelers have informed season ticket holders of a $2 across-the-board hike. The Steelers sell about 95 percent of the 60,000 available seats in Three Rivers to season ticket holders.

Tickets which sold for $17, $15 and $13 last season will now cost $19, $17 and $15, respectively.

The Pirates earlier announced a $1.50 per ticket hike in box seat prices this season.

Miller hurt in accident, may miss Masters

MAPLETON, Utah (AP) — Golfer Johnny Miller was recuperating at his home yesterday following a traffic accident in which he sustained a head laceration and bruises, said an employee of the former U.S. Open and British Open champion.

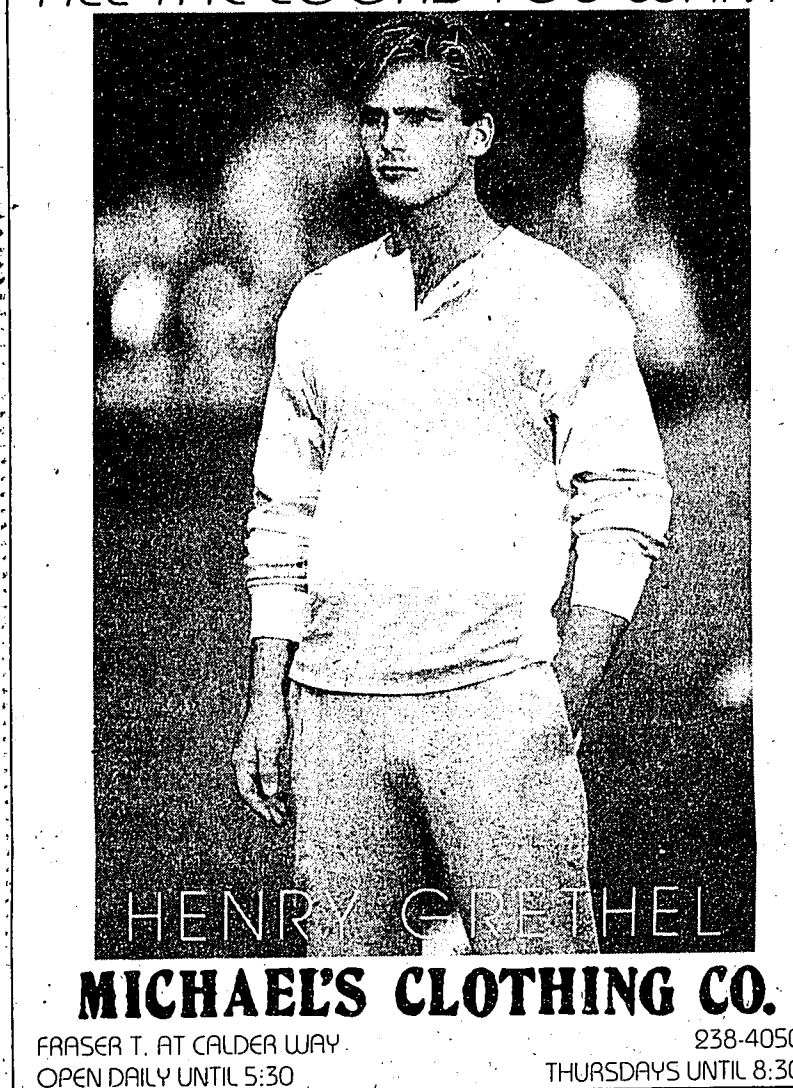

Kent Belcher, who works for Miller at his home, said it was too early to determine whether the golfer would be able to compete in next week's Masters tournament at Augusta, Ga.

"He's planning on it and he's hoping to be there," Belcher said. "It's just a question of how he feels."

Belcher said Miller was "not feeling too well right now."

Bucks, Johnson hold back Philadelphia, 113-103

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Forward Marques Johnson scored nine of his 18 points in the fourth quarter to help the Milwaukee Bucks turn back the Philadelphia 76ers 113-103 in a NBA game last night.

The Sixers scored the first seven points of the final period to cut Milwaukee's lead to 98-97. The Bucks countered on a free throw by Sidney Moncrief and a three-point play by Johnson with 8:05 remaining, and led 92-87.

After Philadelphia guard Andrew Toney sank two free throws, the Bucks went on a 9-2 run to lead 101-91.

Mike Dunleavy scored four points and Alton Lister three during the surge.
