Getting it together

Members of the Fred Waring Music Youth Workshop, top, rehearses their steps for the concert held last night. Meanwhile, Lenny Thomas, below left, choral director for Waring's Pennsylvanians for 13 years, tunes the piano and Tim Powell checks the sound on his bass. The Music Youth Workshop will hold another performance tonight in Schwab Auditorium.

Collegian means Business
all majors welcome

Your Penn State education is an investment. Make it pay dividends.

As a member of the Collegian student Business Staff you have opportunities to gain excellent experience and training in:

* Sales
* Marketing
* Management
* Promotions
* Human relations
* Layout
* Accounting
* Creative design
* Office procedures
* Computers

Make Collegian part of your education. Put some quality in your future.

Applications for our Business Training Program are now available at the Collegian office, 126 Carnegie Building.

Application deadline: July 31
Interviews: August 1 through August 6

You must be a Penn State student to apply. Evening classes will begin in September. If you successfully complete the Business Training Program, you will be invited to join the Office Department of our Business Division.

As a member of the Business Division you will have opportunities to grow personally and professionally, while participating in a unique student activity.

Collegian Inc. is one of the largest and most successful college media organizations in the United States. Collegian Inc. has a dual mission: Publish a good college newspaper for Penn State, provide a rewarding educational experience for our student staff members. The Business Division and the News Division of Collegian Inc. are staffed entirely by students.
