McDonald's site is not a park yet SAN DIEGO (AP) — A McDonald's Corp. official who toured the scene of the nation's worst single-day mass killing by one man lauded community efforts to create a memorial park, but said yesterday a decision on the site's future is not imminent. "If anything positive can come out of a tragedy like this, it is the closeness of that community. There is a real spirit of working together," Richard Starmann, a McDonald's vice president, said in a telephone interview from Chicago. Starmann and other McDonald's officials met with San Diego officials and several community groups in San Ysidro during a three-day visit to the West Coast. The town is about 20 miles south of San Diego. "We talked with a variety of people in the community but that doesn't mean any decision is imminent," Starmann said, "I would guess it's going to be a little while.' All that remains is the brick shell of the McDonald's restaurant where James Oliver Huberty killed 21 people and wounded 19 others in a 77-minute hail of gunfire July 18 before being killed by

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The pine-shaded jogging path around Hollywood Reservoir seems an unlikely terrorist target, but the city's "best place to jog" is closed for the Olympics so police can protect water supplies from poisoning.

Authorities recently slapped up "no parking" signs where many joggers usually park, and police have given violators warning tickets and stepped up car and helicopter patrols near the reservoirs - Los Angeles, Stone Canyon and Encino - and some smaller ones such as Silver Lake, although access to those reservoirs normally is more restricted than at Hollywood, said Steve Hinderer, chief spokesman for the city Department of Water and Power. So Hollywood Reservoir - located beneath the famous "HOL-LYWOOD" sign and deemed an "innner city jogging paradise" in the recently published paperback "The Best of L.A." - is off limits to the public until Aug. 14, two days after the Olympics end. Break-dancers cause mall infestation

Soviet cosmonauts return to earth

MOSCOW (AP) — Three cosmonauts, including the first woman to walk in space, finished a 13-day mission yesterday and returned safely to Earth, the official news agency Tass said. The Soyuz T-12 space capsule, with commander Vladimir Dzhanibekov, flight engineer Svetlana Savitskaya and Igor Volk aboard, landed just before 5 p.m. Moscow time (9 a.m. EDT), southeast of Dzhezkazgan in Soviet Central Asia, Tass said.

All three cosmonauts were in good condition after the landing, Their craft docked with the Soviets' orbiting space station. Salvut-7, during its mission. Savitskaya became the first woman to travel into space twice when the mission began on July 17. On July 25 she became the first woman to walk in space. During more than 31/2 hours outside the space station, she and Dzhanibekov tested a new tool for cutting, welding, soldering and painting, Tass said. Savitskaya, a veteran test pilot, made her first space trip in August 1982 when she spent nine days aboard the Salyut-7.
