

Anderson set to endorse Mondale at rally today

WASHINGTON (AP) — John B. Anderson, who organized an independent presidential campaign against Ronald Reagan and Jimmy Carter in 1980, is set to endorse Democratic presidential nominee Walter F. Mondale.

There is also a possibility that the National Unity Party that Anderson heads will nominate Mondale, and thus provide him with about $7.8 million in public funds, according to knowledgeable sources.

A Mondale campaign official, who spoke on condition he not be identified, confirmed that Anderson will endorse Mondale when the Democratic nominee appears at a rally at the University of Illinois today.

However, Mondale aides said no arrangement had been discussed under which the Anderson party would provide the Mondale organization with money.

More than 7 per cent of the vote cast in 1980 went to Anderson, although he peaked at about 30 per cent in public opinion polls taken early in the campaign.

Under federal election laws, Anderson qualified for public funding for a possible 1984 race if he met the requirements for the formation of a third party.

In 1980, Anderson moved into a vacuum created by many voters dissatisfied with both Carter and Reagan. But there is no such vacuum this year, and last spring Anderson announced that he would not run again in 1984.

He did, however, say he would go ahead with formally organizing the third political party.

More recently, sources said, Anderson has been talking with Mondale directly about a public endorsement. Meanwhile, Mondale's aides and former Wisconsin Gov. Patrick J. Lucey, who was Anderson's running mate in 1980, have been negotiating about the possible third party nomination which would be voted in much the same way as the Liberal Party in New York state supports Democratic candidates.

One source familiar with the discussion said there was concern that even if possible legal hurdles could be overcome, the political implications for Mondale to accept a large amount of money intended to encourage the formation of a third political party could be dangerous.

Mondale aides, who spoke on condition they not be identified, said emphatically that there had been no discussions about such an arrangement.

Sentencing delayed for lady who cooked spouse

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — Sentencing was postponed yesterday for a woman convicted of murder after being accused of fatally shooting her husband, saying apart his body, roasting pieces over the family barbecue and taking a bite out of his charred arm.

Dianna Fellman, 36, appeared in Santa Clara Superior Court, where her request for a new attorney was denied, resulting in a delay in sentencing, a court clerk said. Sentencing, originally scheduled for Monday, was reset for Sept. 11.

Fellman was convicted Aug. 15 of first-degree murder in the death of her husband, Elroy Fellman, 39. Prosecutor Richard Gardner said at the trial that Fellman shot her husband repeatedly with a .22 caliber automatic pistol because he had multiple sclerosis and she didn't want to care for him.

"She told people she didn't want to push a wheelchair," Gardner said. "His body was saved into pieces, parts of his body were put into a fire and according to one of the gals she confessed to, she actually took a bite out of his arm as he was being cooked," he said.

A neighbor testified he saw Fellman sitting near a foul-smelling fire at her rural cabin just south of San Jose Jan. 3, 1983.

Bones identified as Elroy Fellman's were found in February and March of 1983.

Fellman's attorney, James McKittick, has said she would appeal her conviction.

"When I heard that this man had made a statement like that, I thought — a pin-striped, polo playing, umbrella-toting Ivy Leaguer like George Herbert Walker Bush who was born with a silver spoon so far back in his mouth you couldn't get it out with a crow bar — for him to make that kind of statement about a family who had to work for everything they have is as ironic and shows as much gall as a fellow we had to prosecute for killing his mother and father," Baxley said. "And his statement was he was going to throw himself on the mercy of the court because he was an orphan."

At a voter registration rally in Amangasset, N.Y., the hosts presented Ferraro with a giant blueberry muffin — so big an aide could not get an arm around it.

"The glare is incredible up here," she explained. "Then the New York congressman picked up where she left off, talking about Democratic chances in the South."

"Some of the so-called experts said 'Will she campaign in the South?' Well..."

Just then came a loud "squawk." An exotic bird — a parrot perhaps or a macaw among the many housed in cages in the hotel lobby where the rally was held — had decided to speak up.

Ferraro turned toward the offender and quipped: "One of the non-believers."

Occasionally during the rest of her speech, another bird would sound off as well.

During the Alabama rally, Ferraro's congressional district in Queens — which includes the mythical home of Archie and Edith Bunker from the television series "All in the Family" — was mentioned.

Bush, son of a prominent and wealthy Connecticut clan, referred to that series about a working-class family after Ferraro revealed she and her husband have a net worth of several million dollars.

"When Fritz and I were moving along and he had chosen me as his mate, some people... running mate."

"She stepped as the crowd chuckled."

Miami edges No. 1 Auburn in 'classic' game

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON AP Sports Writer

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Bernie Kosar passed for 329 yards and two first-half touchdowns and freshman Greg Cox kicked a pair of field goals, including the game-winning 25-yarder with 6:08 remaining, as defending national champion Miami stunned No. 1-ranked Auburn 20-18 last night in the second annual Kickoff Classic.

The victory in the first college football game of the season made a winner of Jimmy Johnson in his debut as Miami's head coach and stretched the Hurricanes' winning streak to 12 games, longest in the nation.

Although Miami won the 1983 national championship by edging No. 1-ranked Nebraska 31-30 in the Orange Bowl, the Hurricanes were only No. 10 in the 1984 preseason Associated Press poll and were three-point underdogs against Auburn, which felt it should have won the national crown in 1983 but settled for a third-place finish.

Miami carved out its latest shocker on Kosar's scoring passes of 17 and eight yards to flanker Stanley Shakespears in the first 20 minutes, fourth-quarter field goals of 45 and 25 yards by Cox and a rebuilt but fierce defense that held Bo Jackson, Auburn's All-American halfback, to 96 yards on 30 carries.

Meanwhile, Miami got 140 yards on 21 rushes from sophomore Alton Highsmith and stymied Auburn's last threat in a see-saw fourth quarter when defensive end Julio Cortes recovered a fumbled pylon by the losers' Brent Fullwood at the Auburn 49 with 2:57 left to play. The game ended with Miami on the Auburn 2-yard line, where Kosar, who completed 21 of 38 passes, let the clock run out.

Auburn scored its only touchdown on a 21-yard pass from Pat Washington's Brent Fullwood at the Auburn 49 with 2:57 left to play. The game ended with Miami on the Auburn 2-yard line, where Kosar, who completed 21 of 38 passes, let the clock run out.
