Colorado: Not your usual Happy Valley summer

The Daily Collegian Friday, Sept. 7, 1984—11

Not everyone spends their summers in State College or at the beach. With University students coming from nearly every state in the country, the things they do and places they go, are quite diverse. In an attempt to show some of the different lifestyles students from Penn State enjoy, we present Colorado. Collegian Photographer Gregg Zelkin is from Frisco, Colorado, where he spent this summer. Gregg was interested in sharing some of the things which make up a summer in the Rockies. Summertime Rocky Mountain-style brings a variety of things. One can ski and frolic in a hot springs, or attend world class pre-Olympic events all on the same day.

(Left) Seven Falls, a natural cascade made up of seven distinct falls, is a popular attraction in Colorado Springs with a vertical drop of more than two-thousand feet. With the Rockies in the background, Dillon reservoir serves not only as the water supply for Denver, but also as a large recreation area for sailing and fishing. The Coors classic, a major world class cycling event that is held annually, runs for 5 days, travelling around the state during that time. Here, two cyclists from Mexico and Yugoslavia, respectively, compete in Frisco in route on the days 80-mile trip to Copper Mountain. The trip will entail a six-thousand vertical mile climb within this single-day run. Finally, the wing-shaped cathedral at U.S. Air Force Academy, is one of the more striking things visitors will encounter at the Academy in Colorado Springs. Colorado Springs is also the home of the U.S. Olympic Training center. Collegian Photos/Gregg Zelkin
