

Breakaway to benefit March of Dimes

The third annual Phi Who Breakaway, sponsored by the Phi Kappa Theta Fraternity, has been scheduled for 1 p.m. Sunday. This year's event will benefit the Keystone Chapter of the March of Dimes.

Eric Rosenstein, soliciting chairman for the bicycle race, said the race will consist of two routes — a 15- and a 30-mile course — which will have male and female divisions.

Rosenstein said both courses will begin near Beaver Stadium and run through College, Banner and Patton townships. The 15-mile race will finish after one lap through the townships while the 30-mile race will repeat the course route.

Co-publishing chairman Brian Benjamin said the registration fee for both races will be $8 a person.

Breakaway registration will be held in the HUB basement from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. through Friday, Benjamin said. Interested people can also register at a table set up by the fraternity outside the Ski Station, 224 E. College Ave., during the same times.

The event raised about $1,500 last year and the fraternity is campaigning to raise more than twice that this year, Rosenstein said.

Major sponsors for the event are the Cycle Station — a part of the Ski Station — and the Penn Alto Bottling Works in Altoona.

With the assistance of the Alpha Chi Omega sorority, the fraternity is also soliciting donations on College Avenue and holding a raffle.

About $1,000 in prizes are being raffled. Tickets for the raffle cost $1 a piece.

First prize for the raffle will be a Ross bicycle, second prize is a six month membership at Nauti-Human Performance Center and third is a gift certificate from various downtown merchants, Rosenstein said.

Grad school to sponsor minority reception

By ROBERT P. KING
Collegian Staff Writer

A reception for black, Hispanic, Asian and American Indian students will be held at 7 tonight at the Paul Robeson Cultural Center, the assistant dean for minority affairs said.

Roosevelt Green Jr. said the annual reception, sponsored by the Graduate School, is meant to "facilitate interaction between faculty, staff and students, majority and minority, especially among minority graduate students."

Students will have the opportunity to meet each other and "share their problems and potentialities," Green said.

He added that the participants will be encouraged to support the University's efforts to recruit and retain minority students.

"We will ask everyone present to assist us in the recruitment efforts, to get minority grad students to help us recruit other minority grad students."

He said the reception will be followed by a musical presentation by Assistant Professor of Physical Education Warren Coleman, better known as the "Witch Doctor" of WQWK-FM.

Although the reception is being sponsored primarily by the Graduate School, support has been provided by the Graduate Student Association, which Green said is concerned about the reception of minority graduate students at the University.

James Stewart, director of the Black Studies Program, who will be one of the speakers at the reception, said the event is important because of the significant increase in the number of minority students at the University in recent years.

"It's important for minority students to take full advantage of their opportunity to meet each other and establish networks, not only within their disciplines but other students and with faculty and staff," Stewart said.

Green said minority students have a particular problem adjusting to life at Penn State because of the great preponderance of white students, staff and faculty members.

He said black students from urban areas such as Philadelphia also have trouble adjusting to life in a semi-rural setting such as State College.

"At home, a black student is used to going around with a lot of blacks," Green said. "Here, he might go in a classroom and find he is the only black person there. Walking around campus, he sees very few blacks."

"We have had a lot of minority graduate students who were excellent as far as academics is concerned but had difficulty in social adjustment because of the small numbers," Green said.

Nader speech to kick off voter registration drive

To officially kick off the University Student Executive Council's voter registration drive, Ralph Nader will encourage students to vote in a non-partisan speech at 7:30 tonight in Eisenhower Auditorium.

The speech will be sponsored by the Undergraduate Student Government and students will be able to register to vote during the speech, USG President Adam Levinson said.

"Right now he feels it's important that students vote because they are the future leadership of America," Levinson said.

Nader will also address issues such as nuclear waste, budget cuts in education, corporate power and the use and abuse of the postal service, Levinson said.

Nader is a long-time consumer advocate and has written reports on the automotive and other industries.

Sept. 28 will be last chance to pre-register for spring classes

Friday, Sept. 28, is the pre-registration deadline for Spring Semester classes, the director of registration and scheduling said yesterday.

J. James Wager said students must meet with their academic advisers and choose courses for the Spring Semester before turning in the scan form. Scan forms can be obtained from the student's dean, adviser or department office.

Nader is a long-time consumer advocate and has written reports on the automotive and other industries.

Completed pre-registration forms may be submitted in the student's dean office, the HUB or the Registrar's Office in 112 Shields. Failure to submit the form before the deadline will result in a $10 late fee and late registration after classes have begun.

The deadline applies to any student in a degree program who plans to enroll in the University Park campus for Spring Semester 1985, Wager said.

Students will receive white slips listing the courses they received around Nov. 13, Wager said. However, the Registrar's Office is unsure whether the slips will be distributed through the dean or college offices or mailed to the students' home addresses.
