

Stickwomen prep for James Madison

By GLENN SCHUTZ Collegian Sports Writer

The women's field hockey team continues it's current homestand against James Madison University at 3 p.m. today at Lady Lion Field. The Lady Lions (3-2) are fresh from a victory over Ohio State and are ready to continue this season's undefeated home record. "I think that we really needed that win." said Lorraine Razzi, team captain, "the whole team really played as a whole." Razzi feels that the team has matured a great deal over a short time and she sees that as a big plus. "We're all playing as a unit, each of us knows exactly what the others are doing, and where they are on the field," the team captain said. James Madison (0-2) has not played in over a week and the long layoff may hurt the team. The Dutchesses have dropped games to both Connecticut, 7-0, and Boston College, 2-1, this season and have spite being outscored 9-1 this sea- James Madison also lost six of it's big win, there is always a chance work to do," Rattray said. Netmen dominate

By MIKE HOOVER Collegian Sports Writer

As the members of the men's tennis team returned home from Norfolk, Va., Sunday night, they knew they had given their all.

Their optimism was high before leaving for Virginia and their expectations were many. But once the squad had defeated three traditionally aggressive tennis schools, confidence was the overall emotion. The Lions dominated play from the start, only to grow stronger as the competition progressed. It all began with the overpowering of a solid team from Old Dominion, 7-2. Next there was very little George Washington University could do to stop the nomentum of a rolling Penn State squad. The Lions captured eight of the nine matches played on the day. East Carolina was the final opponent to fall prey to the squad, 8-1. "We went through some tough teams pretty handily," No. 4 singles player Marc Verebey said. "At this point our team is building the character to compete with any team and to beat this strong of a competition shows our depth.' "We worked well as a team," No. 1 doubles player Lee Sponau-gle said. A surprising new figure emerging from the Penn State squad is freshman Darby Medowcraft. Medowcraft, the No. 3 singles player, stunned the competition by emerging undefeated in his debut in the South as a collegiate athlete. His teammates are equally overwhelmed with the arrival of this additional force on the squad. "I was impressed with Darby's composure on his first trip," No. 2 doubles player Verebey

"Darby did not show any signs of being nervous," No. 1 singles player Lee Sponaugle said. "He fit in with the team real well."

The battle for the starting fullback The battle for the starting fullback spot on the football team is a lot like the struggle between two rental car the struggle between two rental car companies. Both want to be No. 1 and each makes the other try harder. Such is the case for senior Steve Smith and junior Tim Manoa. The two share the top spot on the depth chart and neither can win the fulltime patronage of Head Coach Joe Paterno Paterno, playing the role of the choosy customer, picks his fullbacks like a traveler deciding which model of car to rent.

When Paterno wants a powerful runner for short yardage situations he calls on Manoa, a 6-01/2, 227 pounder from Pittsburgh. But, when a longer and smoother trip is necessitated the ball goes to Smith, a 6-1, 226 pound native of Clinton, Md. The two have split playing time in the Lions' first two games and played an important role in the 27-25 win over Temple last Saturday. Both players seem receptive of their roles and say they enjoy working against each other. "We compete a lot. I like the competition," Manoa said. "I think it 😳 makes us a lot better. Every day we go out and try to get better." "I've always known that Tim Ma-
