

Reagan attacks tax-reform critics

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer

CONCORD, N.H. — President Reagan, returning to a state that helped propel him to the White House, struck back yesterday at critics who say the public is unenthusiastic about the tax-revision plan he has made a keystone of his second-term program.

"There are politicians in Washington — some of the same ones who constructed this tax code monstrosity — who say you, the American people, are not interested in tax reform," Reagan told a cheering crowd from the steps of the New Hampshire State House.

"The political establishment back in Washington says you don't care about these things," he said. "I say the Washington establishment is out of touch with the people."

But in Washington, congressional leaders agreed they will not be able to deliver tax overhaul legislation to Reagan's desk this year, as he wanted.

"I don't think it has any chance of getting through Congress this year," House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., said after a private meeting with Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., and other top congressional leaders.

Earlier in the day, Dole repeated to reporters his view that "I don't see how we can finish it this year."

Members of Congress ranging from the liberal O'Neill to conservative Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., have said that they detect no enthusiasm for tax revision among voters, who they say are more interested in trade and other issues.

The loudest cheers came at the end of Reagan's 25-minute speech, when he announced that the Rev. Benjamin Weir, a 61-year-old Presbyterian missionary, had been released 16 months after being kidnapped in Lebanon. Six other Americans remain captive.

"Before I thank you for letting me be here today, I just have a little news note," Reagan said in confirming news reports of Weir's release. "... I'm pleased to inform you, if you haven't heard, that Rev. Benjamin Weir... has now been released.

"I talked with Rev. Weir on Air Force One this morning, and I'm happy for him and his family," the president added. "But I will not be satisfied and will not cease our efforts until all the hostages, the other six, are released."

At his televised news conference in Washington on Tuesday night, Reagan fielded questions about trade, foreign policy, arms control and the disease AIDS, but did not get a single question about his tax plan. But Reagan drew loud cries of

"No!" from his audience when he asked, "Are those politicians right when they say you don't care?"

After returning to the White House, Reagan met with Sen. Robert Packwood, R-Ore., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, who said afterward, "So long as we are prepared to stay here until Christmas, and I hope we are, we can get a tax bill to the president this year."

The president's appearance at the 166-year-old granite State House marked his first visit to the state since he took office in 1981. His victory in New Hampshire's first-in-the-nation presidential primary in 1980 was a major milestone on his path to the presidency.

"Many of you were active in that campaign," he told his audience. "Together we started something that has changed the face of America."

Counting his appearance here, Reagan has campaigned for his tax plan in 16 cities in 14 states since Memorial Day.

Noting New Hampshire's relatively low taxes, the president charged that the current federal tax system "rewards rich states with big budgets and high taxes."

S. Africa strikes guerrillas in Angola

By JAMES F. SMITH
Associated Press Writer

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Nearly 500 South African-led troops have pushed into Angola to attack several hundred black guerrillas fighting for South-West Africa's independence, the military said yesterday.

Spokesmen also said warplanes staged an air strike on the guerrillas' forward command post near the village of Nehone, 60 miles into southern Angola. There was no immediate word on casualties.

But Defense Minister Pedro Maria Tonha of Angola challenged the South African version and said the real purpose of the incursion was to aid the beleaguered rebel movement fighting to overthrow the Marxist Angolan government. Tonha said the South African backed rebels were under heavy fire from an Angolan offensive.

The Reagan administration urged South Africa to withdraw its forces. State Department spokesman Bernard Kabib said in Washington that the administration is "not sympathetic to South African assertions of any right to conduct military expeditions into Angola under the theory of defending its illegal presence in Namibia."

In Pretoria, Defense Force headquarters gave details for the first time on the three-day-old operation. It said 12 units of about 40 men each were pursuing 400 to 800 guerrillas in a battalion of the South-West Africa People's Organization, SWAPO, which fought since 1966 from bases in southern Angola to end South African rule over South-West Africa, also called Namibia.

"In this operation, the security forces intend to find these members and destroy them," the statement said, adding that the troops also fought guerrilla arms caches, food and ammunition stores.

Air Force planes conducted search missions to aid the ground troops, which include both South Africans and local Namibian forces, the statement said. The Defense Force accused the Angolan army of aiding the SWAPO guerrillas in violation of a February 1984 accord that ended a South African occupation of southern Angola. The statement warned Angola not to interfere with the new incursion against SWAPO.

Since South African forces completed their withdrawal in May, "it rapidly became obvious that Angola's forces not only provided SWAPO with logistical help, but also informed them of (South African) security force actions," the Defense Force said.

This was the second South African raid into Angola in 10 weeks. On June 30 and July 1, South African troops killed 57 SWAPO guerrillas in a quick operation across the border.

The United States and other Western governments condemned the new raid, but the South African Broadcasting Corp. replied in an editorial, "There is no alternative except surrender to the revolutionaries. Whether the destroyers are bush terrorists or urban radicals engaging in action to make the country ungovernable, they have to be answered on their own terms."

The United States is one of five countries trying to negotiate a ceasefire in the Namibian war. But talks have broken down over South Africa's insistence, backed by the Reagan administration, that Angola send some an estimated 25,000 Cuban troops as a condition for Namibian independence.

South Africa seized the territory during World War I and has ignored U.N. resolutions demanding it withdraw.

Angola has battled the anti-Marxist Union for the Total Independence of Angola (UNITA), led by Jonas Savimbi, for a decade since independence. UNITA claims to control the southeastern third of Angola from its base at the village of Jamba.

Tonha, in a statement issued through the official Angolan News Agency monitored in Lisbon, said a total of 18 South African warplanes had bombed Angolan Army positions at Mavinga, 150 miles north of the Namibian border.

Committee votes to keep LCB

HARRISBURG (AP) — A Senate committee recommended yesterday that the Legislature maintain Pennsylvania's 51-year-old state store system but strip the Liquor Control Board of its enforcement powers.

The Senate Law and Justice Committee voted 6-3 in favor of the recommendations, which were drafted after the panel heard nearly 50 witnesses during six days of hearings.

The vote by the Republican-controlled committee was counter to Gov. Dick Thornburgh's stance that the LCB and state store system should be abolished. Thornburgh has called the agency corrupt and state stores obsolete.

"I feel a little like a disciple who attended the Last Supper. I've been vindicated," said Sen. Robert J. Mellow, D-Lackawanna, a supporter of the state store system.

"I hope we can now put to rest the issue of divestiture and get on with the issue of reform," he said.

But Sen. Richard A. Tighman, R-Montgomery, one of three Republicans to vote against the recommendations, said the vote will have little impact on the anti-LCB movement.

"This is a skirmish. The battle is ahead of us," he said. The LCB is one of 28 state agencies to undergo a "sunset review" in the 1985-86 legislative session. Under the law, the LCB will cease operations Dec. 31 unless legislation is approved to continue its existence.

AIDS infiltrates the U.N.

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Eight U.N. staff members in New York have had AIDS in the last four years and four of them have died, the organization's chief medical officer reported yesterday.

Dr. Michael Irwin denied rumors that scores of U.N. employees were afflicted with the often deadly disease. He said: "I wish to point out that medical reporting system of the United Nations is, of course, of the highest accuracy."

In a statement, Irwin said the cases were being treated with confidentiality and he could not comment on any particular case. He said there was no one with AIDS currently working at the United Nations.

But he added: "There is no policy to bar such persons from working if they are physically able to perform their normal duties." Irwin said in the statement read to reporters by U.N. spokesman Francois Giuliani.

Belushi had very high heroin levels

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The amount of heroin found in comedian John Belushi was as deadly as 10 bullets in the brain, a pathologist testified yesterday in the preliminary hearing of a woman accused of administering the lethal dose.

Dr. Michael Baden, deputy chief medical examiner in New York City, said not only was the heroin deadly, but the presence of cocaine contributed to Belushi's death on March 5, 1982, in a bungalow at the Chateau Marmont Hotel.

"If I might, I would compare it with being shot in the brain 10 times," Baden said. "One wound might be enough to kill you, but there are still many others." The hearing is being held to determine if there's enough evidence against Cathy Evelyn Smith for a trial. Miss Smith is charged with second-degree murder and 13 counts of furnishing heroin and cocaine.

A former back-up singer to Hoyt Axton and Gordon Lightfoot, Miss Smith was quoted in the National Enquirer as saying she repeatedly injected Belushi with a "speedball," a mixture of cocaine and heroin, before his death.

Baden, who had examined the Los Angeles coroner's report along with tissue samples and photographs of Belushi, agreed with previous testimony as to the cause of the comic's death.

U.S. subsidizing Soviet build-up

WASHINGTON, D.C. (AP) — The Soviets have been much more successful than previously thought in stealing Western technology and as a result, "we are subsidizing the military buildup of the Soviet Union," Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger said yesterday.

Weinberger released a study asserting the Soviets have targeted specific American defense contractors and universities; are acquiring thousands of technical reports that are not classified but are useful, and are diverting high-tech equipment designed for one purpose but which can be used in weapons programs.

"By their own estimate, more than 5,000 Soviet military research projects each year are benefiting significantly from Western acquired technology," Weinberger said at a news conference.

The report said that while comprehensive figures are not available, the Soviets estimate they saved at least $400 million in 1980 alone on selected military research projects by obtaining Western technology.

Neither Weinberger nor Assistant Defense Secretary Richard Perle, who later briefed reporters on the study, would elaborate on the sources used to measure the Soviet effort.

But the report, said Perle, should lead to efforts by the United States to "even up" the number of Soviet diplomats allowed to operate here compared with the Americans in the Soviet Union.

Garbo turns 80, speaks to press

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Greta Garbo, the reclusive movie star who turned 80 yesterday, said she is homesick for Sweden and hinted she is "tired of being Garbo," according to a Swedish magazine publisher who said he obtained the first interview with her since 1927.

Sven Broman, 63, a Garbo biographer and magazine publisher, said Garbo is homesick for her native Sweden but "fears the commotion that would follow on her return after years of absence."

"She wants to be left alone," the Swedish journalist told reporters in the town of Malmo in southern Sweden.

Broman promised he would tell more of his recent talks with Garbo in a nationally broadcast tribute to her last night.

He said he had three sessions and spoke for hours last month with the star of films such as "Camille," "Mata Hari," and "Ninotchka."

"It was the event of my life," he said of the interviews he conducted at an unidentified alpine hotel in the German-speaking part of Switzerland.

Garbo, a United States citizen since 1951, divides her time between homes in New York and Switzerland.

Seven Soviets meet in space

MOSCOW (AP) — Three Soviet cosmonauts docked their Soyuz T-14 spacecraft with the orbiting manned Salyut 7 space station yesterday, the official news agency, Tass, reported.

Tass said the two cosmonauts who have been aboard the station for more than three months will leave the orbiting lab and return to Earth, but it did not say when.

The docking took place at 10:15 a.m. EDT, Tass said. About three hours later the three cosmonauts entered the space station after post-docking checks were carried out.

The Soyuz T-14 spacecraft was launched on Tuesday with cosmonauts Vladimir Vasyutin, Georgy Grechko and Alexander Volkov aboard.

The other cosmonauts, Vladimir Dzhanibekov and Viktor Savinykh, have been aboard the Salyut 7 since June 8. They were sent aloft to carry out repairs when the lab was drifting out of control due to electrical faults.

Freshmen and Sophomores Majoring in Electrical Engineering, Computer Science... Languages.

This is your chance to find out about a unique opportunity to earn while you learn, through the National Security Agency's COOPERATIVE EDUCATION PROGRAM.

In case you haven't heard, NSA plays an important role in analyzing foreign signals, safeguarding our government's vital communications and securing government computer systems. Through NSA's Co-op Program, you'll gain valuable experience in your major field, while performing work that is uniquely important.

To make sure your learning experience is continually challenging, NSA varies your work assignment with each work period. Here are a few examples of what you could be doing:

- Electrical Engineering. Design and development, test and evaluation of electronic communications systems. Your multi-disciplinary assignments may extend to such rapidly advancing areas as optics, lasers, acoustics and micro-processors.
- Signals Analysis. Limited opportunities for students majoring in Electrical Engineering and Physics. Assignments include identification and classification of electro-magnetic emissions, radar systems, telemetry, beacon signals and trajectory data.
- Computer Science. Opportunities include applications programming, design and implementation of software systems such as data base management systems, real time systems, management information systems, networking and distributed processing systems.
- Languages. You must be majoring in a Slavic, Near-Eastern or Asian language. Work experiences include translation, reporting and analysis.

Don't miss this opportunity to be part of a learning experience that is unlike any other. Contact your Co-op Program Coordinator for an appointment to talk with an NSA representative.

NSA will be on campus for interviews Friday, Oct. 4. Contact Shirl Henry at 865-0225 to schedule an interview.
An evening information session will be held at 7:00 p.m. on Thursday, October 3. See the Placement Office for details.
