

Reporter tells of Cyprus' invasion

By VICTORIA PETTIES
Collegian Staff Writer

The U.S. government alleges the 1974 Turkish invasion of north Cyprus was a result of internal problems between Greek Cypriots and Turkish Cypriots, a British journalist said during a lecture on American relations with Cyprus last night.

Christopher Hitchens said the U.S. government finalized a step in a misinformation process by stating the problems in the Greek Cypriots and the Turkish Cypriots. This government viewed the separation of the northern region, which is occupied by Turkish Cypriots, and southern region of Greek Cypriots, as the result of a dispute within the island.

New cable channel discussed

A developing public-access television channel might provide an outlet for the energies of young filmmakers and video enthusiasts in Centre County.

The Government/Educational Cable Television Access Task Force, which includes representatives of area government agencies, discussed the possibility that State College area and university students could create short feature films for use on the station.

Marjorie Froke, task force member, said last night that film and video capture the imaginations of many young people.

"I think we should challenge youngsters to work in the medium," he said.

The task force plans to broadcast on Channel 19 with a format similar to WRSC's Channel 4, Bill Rigby, task force chairman, said. Channel 4 broadcasts community news information throughout the day.

However, Channel 19 will be a non-profit organization government, a North American ally, to protect the 1,000-mile border against Soviet aggression. Yet the Turkish government is using the military supplies in Cyprus, Hitchens said. There are 40,000 troops stationed in the southern region of the country.

Forty percent of Cyprus is now occupied by Turkish Cypriots in the northern half of the country. Greek Cypriots make up 42 percent of the total 800,000 population, and Turkish Cypriots account for 18 percent of the population. After the Turkish government invaded 11 years ago, Greek Cypriots were forced to move to the southern half of the island.

There is an expensive, sophisticated military base in the northern region of Cyprus to be used by the U.S. rapid deployment forces, Hitchens said. Turkey is building military supplies which will eventually be used to take over the entire island of Cyprus. The Cyprus invasion should be viewed as part of a wider ambition, Hitchens said. Christianity was erased completely when the Turkish government invaded Cyprus, Hitchens said. The highly evolved Christianity culture represents the core of existence in Cyprus.

"Cyprus is an important piece of the Middle East jigsaw," Hitchens said, because it is a neutral meeting place for countries. Greece cannot survive without the United States, Hitchens said. The only method by which Greece will achieve enough military power to contend with Turkey is to make the U.S. government believe Greece is a better ally than Turkey.

Hitchens described the United States as a paymaster to Turkey, explaining that as long as Turkey defends the North Atlantic Treaty Alliance, this government will give that country military supplies.

which will take selective community activities and programs such as the Arts Festival and turn them into television programs, he said.

At this time, task force members are uncertain about an exact program schedule and funding for the station.

To garner funds, task force member Leslie Montz suggested offering a membership which could be bought by area organizations who would then have a say in programming.

Froke also suggested the possibilities of an arts-related grant.

Channel 19 will be broadcast through Centre Video, which serves approximately 90 percent of Centre County, said Jeff Fisher, Centre Video's systems manager.

Although a broadcast location has not been determined, several possibilities that include Schlow Memorial Library, 100 E. Beaver Ave., and State College Area High School, 653 Westerly Parkway, are being discussed, Fisher said.

Rigby said the task force hopes to begin broadcasting sometime next year.

Thornburgh surveys flood damage

By EDWARD FROST
Associated Press Writer

PITTSBURGH — Gov. Dick Thornburgh completed a three-hour tour of the Monongahela Valley yesterday as slowly receding waters kept about 1,500 people from their homes after record-breaking floods hit five southwestern Pennsylvania counties.

"Most of the homes are going to have a lot of heavy, heavy damage," West Elizabeth Police Officer George Payne said of 100 houses in his Allegheny County community. "Most of the people down there are going to lose everything."

Some residents of Washington and Fayette counties were asked to ration drinking water after flooding forced nine water plants along the Monongahela to shut down. The utilities were providing drinking water from reserves but asked customers to conserve supplies, the state Department of Environmental Resources said.

The Washington Township Municipal Authority declared a water emergency and a spokesman said treatment facilities may not begin operations until the weekend. The authority serves 4,000 residents in Fayette and Washington counties.

In Washington County, the towns of Roscoe, Stockdale, Elco and Alleghart were being supplied by state National Guard tankers, said Earl Bugalle, a county spokesman. "We are in serious jeopardy of losing water for the boroughs of Donora and Charleroi," he said.

Homeowners with wells may be asked to boil their drinking water first and may have to have wells cleaned and disinfected before they can be used safely, Bugalle said.

Four communities in Fayette County — Fairhope, Labelle, Point Marion and Masontown — also were having water trucked in, the county emergency management agency said.

Thornburgh and Lt. Gov. William W. Scranton III flew over the flooded areas by helicopter and later landed in Brownsville in Fayette County and West Brownsville and California in Washington County by car, said gubernatorial spokesman Dave Runkel.

"The governor wanted an eyeball inspection," Runkel said. The state is considering asking for a federal disaster declaration, he said.

John Comey, spokesman for the Pennsylvania Emergency Management Agency, said 1,500 people remained out of their flooded homes yesterday, some staying at 10 emergency shelters established by the Red Cross.

Local officials said as many as 5,000 residents were evacuated at the height of the flooding.

Four days of rain in the nation's mid-Atlantic region has been blamed for at least 26 deaths and thousands of evacuations in West Virginia and Virginia.

Flooding in southwestern Pennsylvania, aggravated by runoff from a 7-inch downpour in the West Virginia headwaters of the Monongahela, broke records set in 1956 but brought no loss of life.

State and federal officials planned to tour flooded communities yesterday to compile a damage estimate expected to be in the millions.

"Until the water goes down it's really hard to guess about damage," Morgan said. Authorities credited the National Weather Service's river forecasters for helping prevent any serious injuries in Pennsylvania, although rescuers were still searching Walnut Creek in Erie County for salmon fisherman Lawrence Kalseswski, 28, of Edinboro, who was swept away early Tuesday.

"River flooding is predictable. It's something that normally you can get sufficient warning out to the communities," Comey said. "We had the early predictions of crest and flooding Monday night."

Thornburgh ordered 600 Pennsylvania National Guardsmen to help with relief efforts.

Thornburgh made $1 million in emergency funds available in Allegheny, Fayette, Greene, Washington and Somerset counties after the Monongahela reached flood depths not seen for 50 years.

U.S. Rep. Joseph Gaydos, a McKeesport Democrat, asked Thornburgh to include Westmoreland County so that the flood-damaged community of Webster in Roanoke Township would also be eligible for government assistance.

State transportation officials said portions of at least 20 roads were under water, and pavement had disappeared in three places along one Fayette County road. A bridge at Brownsville was permanently closed due to damage from one of scores of runaway barges.

Floodwaters crested in Pittsburgh, where the Monongahela and Allegheny rivers meet to form the Ohio, at 5 a.m. yesterday, at 29.2 feet, 1.2 feet over flood stage. The swelling water poured over a retaining wall and forced the downtown portion of the eastbound Penn Lincoln Parkway to close through the morning.

Aldo Angelo, National Weather Service hydrologist, said the Ohio River continued to rise downstream and was expected to crest at 26.8 feet, a little above flood stage, in Wheeling, W. Va. at 7 p.m. yesterday.

Neither the Allegheny nor Youghiogheny rivers exceeded flood levels, the National Weather Service said.
