dents and student organizations were formed to provide students with responsibility for themselves while protecting the University from liability.

The IFC / Panhellenic Council Judicial Board would be responsible for the initial judging of violations of the University's policies within fraternities and sororities. For other organizations, initial judging would be handled by the USG Supreme Court and the Graduate Student Association.

IFC President John Rooney, also a member of the task force, said the task force's recommendations concerning fraternities are fairer than its draft recommendations.

Fraternities might be willing to accept the recommendations since the task force showed its faith in fraternities by giving them responsibility for enforcing University policies, Rooney said.

However, he said he is not certain how other fraternity members will react to the recommendations.

Sponsors of activities in residence halls would also be held responsible for enforcing University policies, under the recommendations.

Patty Martin, president of the Association of Residence Hall Students, said the recommendations concerning residence halls have not changed much since the task force's original draft.

However, some strict recommendations, such as registering parties, have been removed, said Martin, also a member of the task force. Most changes were a result of student input.

"I think students will be pleased that their concerns were listened to and taken into consideration," Martin said.

Along with requiring student organizations and residence hall students to follow state drinking laws, the task force have made these recommendations:

- Open parties with unrestricted access would be prohibited. Invitation lists for men and women would be required to determine admission to an event or activity.

- People under 18 years old would be prohibited from activities where alcoholic beverages are served, unless they hold a valid college identification card.

- Student organizations and residence hall groups would be responsible for verifying that people served alcohol are of legal drinking age. To enable this, the University should add the student's birthdate to ID cards.

- All activities must end no later than 2 a.m. and the number of people attending the event should comply with state safety regulations.

The task force also made optional recommendations to student groups and residence hall students. These recommendations include serving snacks and alternative beverages and prohibiting drinking games and contests.

Jordan said he wants to give staff members who will have to work with the new policy time over the summer to work with the recommendations before large numbers of students return in fall.

To help him make a decision, Jordan said he plans to meet with professionals in student service programs and specialists with alcohol abuse among college students.

Jordan also plans to meet with attorneys to discuss the legal ramifications of the recommendations. Jordan said his first concern is to protect the University from liability created by alcohol use among University students.

Even though he has not had time to fully study the task force's final recommendations, Jordan said he is "extremely impressed" by the task force's work.

Jordan said the recommendations are clear and precise and have fulfilled his initial expectations.

Reagan

Brussels and finally home for the speech.

Reagan's plane, Air Force One, landed at Andrews Air Force Base, outside Washington, in a light drizzle at 8:40 p.m. EST.

Gorbachev provided a report of his own in a 90-minute news conference before leaving Geneva. He said that "all restraint will be blown to the wind" if the United States does not compromise on Reagan's "Star Wars," but also declared that the talks were productive.

"I would be so bold as to say the world has become a more secure place" because of the summit, the Soviet leader said.

Reagan said his summit partner was an "energetic defender of summit policy. He was an eloquent speaker, and a good listener," and added that the five hours the two men spent in one-on-one sessions were "the best part — our fireside summit."

But even as he praised Gorbachev's style, Reagan said bluntly, "I can't claim we had a meeting of the minds on such fundamentals as ideology or national purpose — but we understand each other better. That's key to peace."

In his 20-minute speech, the president also listed several agreements to emerge from the talks:

- A new agreement for cultural exchanges between the United States and the Soviet Union, involving artists, students, teachers and others.

- Decision to establish a new Soviet consulate in New York and a new American facility in Kiev. This will give the United States a permanent presence in the Ukraine for the first time in decades, Reagan said.

- Accord, together with Japan, on a new Pacific air safety agreement.

- He said he looks forward to welcoming Gorbachev to the United States in 1986.

Reagan also said that on arms control, he and the Soviet leader are "both instructing our negotiators to hasten their vital work. The world is waiting for results."

Absent from Reagan's speech was the sense of frustration conveyed by Gorbachev who spent most of his news conference discussing the failure to reach an arms agreement.
