Harris' future uncertain

By LINDSEY TANNER
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO — For Al Harris, a key player on the Chicago Bears' 1984 defensive line, the team's smashing 46-10 Super Bowl victory over the New England Patriots was bittersweet.

While most of the Bears were celebrating their first title in 22 years in a downtown ticker tape parade cheered by thousands of euphoric fans yesterday, Harris was at his suburban home contemplating the victory and his future in football.

Harris, a 6-foot-5, 250-pound defensive end, and safety Todd Bell held out for more money and missed the entire 1985 season when Bears' management declined to meet their demands.

Harris, 29, said he never thought he'd be out for the entire season and had a hard time masking his disappointment over missing the Bears' victory at New Orleans.

"I'm happy for them," he said in a telephone interview. "What can I say? There was no crying or anything.

"I watched (the game) on TV. Of course, you'd like to be there.

While Harris had hoped to be a part of the Bears' victorious season, he said he may not have been missed.

"Obviously, they went to the Super Bowl," he said. "I don't know how much of an impact it (his absence) had on the team."

As for his status with the Bears and prospects for playing with the team next year, Harris said: "I don't know. I'm not going to make any comment until I talk with them."

"Nothing's going to be talked about until Feb. 1," when the team opens contract negotiations for next season, he said.

Meanwhile, Bell and team officials could not be reached for comment yesterday. Bell was not at his home in Ohio, and team officials were returning from the Super Bowl.

Minnesota cagers to continue season

By MIKE NADEL
AP Sports Writer

MINNEAPOLIS — The University of Minnesota basketball team will resume its season despite the arrest of three players on sexual assault charges, university President Kenneth Keller said yesterday.

Keller also named Jimmy Williams acting coach. Williams was an assistant coach under Jim Dutcher, who resigned Saturday after the university said it would forfeit a Sunday game against Northwestern.

Keller said he made the decision to allow the team to continue after agonizing for several days over whether the university's interests would be better served by canceling the remaining games.

He said he thought even more seriously of canceling the remainder of the season after athletic boosters pointed out how valuable basketball was to the university. But he said he decided to let the season resume Thursday night with a home game against Ohio State out of fairness to the eight members of the team not involved in the incident.

"We are not looking for scapegoats," Keller said. "We are not looking for a pound of flesh."

Keller said the charges in Madison, Wis., against the three Minnesota basketball players are "as serious as anyone can imagine."

"My personal reaction is horror, and disgust and some amount of despair that we as an academic institution have created the environment in which that can happen," Keller said.

He said he was confident the remaining players on the team would present a positive image for the university.

"The other eight have been traumatized by that offense. They appear not to have been involved in it," Keller said. "They appear, perhaps, at this point less likely than any other group of young people in the country to get themselves into difficulty in the next several weeks."

Mitchell Lee, 20, of Carol City, Fla., and Kevin Smith, 21, of Lansing, Mich., were charged yesterday with first-degree sexual assault in Dane County Circuit Court for allegedly attacking an 18-year-old Madison woman. The two were also charged with second-degree sexual assault, as was a third player, George Williams Jr., 19, of Oakland, Calif.

All three are sophomore forwards who have started occasionally for the Gophers.

An 18-year-old student at Madison Area Technical College reported Friday that she had been attacked at the Concourse Hotel, where the Golden Gophers stayed Thursday after defeating Wisconsin in a Big Ten basketball game.

Dane County Court Commissioner Todd Meurer set a cash bail for Lee at $5,500, for Smith at $4,000 and for Williams at $1,000 at the trio's initial court appearance yesterday afternoon.

Lee and Williams posted bail last night, court officials said.

Keller said that, even if found innocent, the three would not play basketball again at Minnesota. In retrospect, he said, Lee should not have been permitted to return only three days after being acquitted of another rape charge.

Cosell a 'Nice Guy'

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — Sportscaster Howard Cosell, who criticized his former ABC Monday Night Football colleagues in a book published last year, is winner of TV Guide's 11th annual Mr. Nice Guy Award for "a sports figure displaying boorish actions."

Cosell, whose critically acclaimed "Sportsbeat" program was canceled by ABC in December, "went out in Nice Guy fashion, knocking the firm that made him rich and famous and knocking colleagues with whom he worked," wrote TV Guide sports writer Mel Durslag, who chose the winner and contenders.

The magazine disclosed the results in its Feb. 1 issue.

Cosell was chosen over baseball pitcher Joaquin Andujar, who as a member of the St. Louis Cardinals refused a bid to play in the All-Star Game and was ejected in the seventh game of the World Series for bumping an umpire. He has since been traded to the Oakland A's.

Third place went to Indiana University basketball Coach Bobby Knight for throwing a chair across the court in a game against Purdue and for not permitting two of his players to fly home from a game against Ohio State because he was displeased with their play.

Also named as contenders were Detroit Lions football coach Darryl Rogers, University of Miami football coach Jimmy Johnson, New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner and tennis star John McEnroe.

Cosell became the first broadcaster to win the award. Steinbrenner won it three times — in 1980, 1981 and 1982.

Cosell's book, "I Never Played the Game," raised a furor because of a chapter in which he criticized former broadcast partners Frank Gifford and Don Meredith.

Cosell said Gifford was a "Teflon man" because no matter what mistakes he made, "nothing sticks to him" and television critics treat him well.
