For the time being, at least, the games will involve the league's traditionally U.S.-based teams. But NFL officials would not rule out the long-term possibility of franchises in Europe and Japan. "The league's long-range planning committee and the clubs both approved the concept of staging a series of games over the next several years here, in Europe, in Japan," Rhein said. "What the exact chronology of those games will be, we don't know. But the idea is to try to go into as many different areas as we can." The game between the defending Super Bowl-champion Bears and the Cowboys, nicknamed "America's Team" for their success
