By BRENDA FOSTER
Collegian Staff Writer

The 14th annual Liberal Arts Career Day, "The L.A. Advantage," attracted more than 400 students yesterday, said Peter Hagen, assistant to the associate dean of liberal arts and director of the program.

"We consider the day very worthwhile," Hagen said, "even though we actually expected more than the 400 to 500 students that showed up."

The program was highlighted by several panel discussions from University alumni who have gained employment in liberal arts fields. One such discussion focused on the use of a liberal arts education in the areas of government and law.

Major James F. Quinn, a 1971 University graduate and an assistant professor at the United States Military Academy at West Point, began the discussion with a talk on the liberal arts as preparation for a career in law.

"You can choose any major for law school as long as you do well in it," Quinn said.

Quinn also discussed the importance of taking communications courses, such as English and speech, to help enhance writing and speaking skills. He also stressed the need for students to attend a law school in the state where they plan to practice. This will make them more familiar with the laws of that state and make it easier to pass the state's bar exam, Quinn said.

Robert Lee, University professor of public administration and assistant director of the institute of public administration, began his discussion on careers in the public and non-profit sector by explaining that 15 percent of today's workforce is employed in government jobs.

Lee advised that a student considering a career in government look at all the branches and sectors before deciding on an area of employment.

"Students should consider what extent they want contact with the public, since local government offers much contact, while the federal government offers very little," Lee said.

State Rep. Gerard A. Kosinski, D-Phila., a 1976 graduate of the University, focused his speech on careers in both law and government.

Kosinski encouraged students not to be afraid of failure and assured them that a liberal arts education as well as good communication skills are very helpful in getting a government job.

Students should make themselves aware of the many careers in government, both civil service and patronage, as well as possibilities in the field of law, Kosinski said.

Helen Kearney, a management development officer in the office of information technology for the Central Intelligence Agency and a 1962 graduate of the University, talked about professional development in government and stressed the need for a broad-based education in the liberal arts.

Panelists tell liberal arts majors about the advantages of being flexible

By KARL HOKÉ
Collegian Staff Writer

The communication and managerial skills liberal arts students acquire give them flexibility in the job market that enhances their marketability and their ability to adapt to a changing economy, said a member of a business panel involved in L.A. Advantage Day.

"Management, by definition, is the act of influencing people positively and productively," said Dwayne Adams, a 1968 University General Arts and Sciences graduate who is now assistant vice president of Mellon Bank in Allentown.

"There is going to come a time when you cannot do everything that needs to be done, and you'll have to delegate more authority," he said. "For this reason managers must communicate well with the people they manage, he said.

In addition, Adams said individuals who specialize in a technical field will find that specialization is sometimes self-limiting in terms of job opportunities in a changing economic climate.

"There is always a point in time when you can't advance on a specialty," said Adams, referring to the more technical fields such as science and engineering.

"The economy is changing — it is not static," said Adams. He said a liberal arts education produces a "generalist" as opposed to a "specialist." A generalist has the advantage in a changing economy, he said, because they are not limited to one field as the specialist is.

The other members of the panel agreed with this assessment.

"The key thing with a liberal arts degree is it gives you the ability to be flexible," said Abraham Koch, a 1968 history graduate who is now senior vice president for Traveler Mortgage Services of Cherry Hill, N.J.

Koch said many students unknowingly limit their job opportunities because of a mindset that says they must specialize while in college. He specific skills, such as in technical fields, are more likely to be affected by these economic changes.

"What's saleable is concepts and the ability to adapt to change. Specialized departments may not exist in five years," Draver said.

LA Advantage Day was held yesterday in the HUB to show that contrary to what people may think, a liberal arts degree does give students advantages over others in finding gainful employment and a fulfilling career.

Head Coach Sue Scheetz said the Lady Lions looked flat in the second half, and added that that may have been caused by the persistence of the Lady Blue Hens.

"During the second half, we were a little bit sluggish," Scheetz said. "Delaware didn't let up at all."

Penn State broke out of the starting gates jumping out to a 6-1 lead, midway through the first half, and it was Veal who spearheaded the attack.

The junior from Montville, N.J., notched her 18th, 19th and 20th goals of the season, all in the first half as she paced a balanced Lady Lion attack. "Amanda played very well," Scheetz said.

Veal's last goal, with 1:31 left in the first half, gave Penn State a comfortable 8-2 halftime lead. But that comfortable lead was

No. 1 lady laxers turn back Delaware

By CHRIS LODER
Collegian Sports Writer

Over the past few years, the Delaware Lady Blue Hens have been a nemesis of sorts to the women's lacrosse team in critical games.

Although Penn State owned a 5-2 series advantage before yesterday's game, Delaware ousted the Lady Lions in the 1983 and 1984 NCAA Championships.

The Lady Blue Hens were looking for more of the same yesterday when they hosted the top-ranked Lady Lions in what many considered a critical game. Unfortunately for the Lady Blue Hens, their luck ran out.

Booyed by hat tricks from Amanda Veal, Maggy Dunphy and Tami Worley, the No. 1 Lady Lions plucked the Lady Blue Hens, 13-8, yesterday in Newark, Del.

The win boosted the Lady Lions' record to 8-4, while unranked Delaware fell to 2-4.

Head Coach Sue Scheetz said the Lady Lions looked flat in the second half, and added that that may have been caused by the persistence of the Lady Blue Hens.

"During the second half, we were a little bit sluggish," Scheetz said. "Delaware didn't let up at all."

Penn State broke out of the starting gates jumping out to a 6-1 lead, midway through the first half, and it was Veal who spearheaded the attack.

The junior from Montville, N.J., notched her 18th, 19th and 20th goals of the season, all in the first half as she paced a balanced Lady Lion attack. "Amanda played very well," Scheetz said.

Veal's last goal, with 1:31 left in the first half, gave Penn State a comfortable 8-2 halftime lead. But that comfortable lead was quickly placed in jeopardy in the second half as Delaware mounted a furious comeback. The Lady Blue Hens closed the gap to three early in the second half and trailed 11-7 with a little more than six minutes remaining. But Dunphy iced the game with two insurance goals late in the game.

'During the second half, we were a little bit sluggish. Delaware didn't let up at all' ... 'I expect more of a running game from Rutgers.'

— Sue Scheetz, head coach

Senior tri-captain Beth Thompson added two goals and two assists to her team-high 40 points, while Beth Stokes and Anna Marie Vesco each added a goal for the Lady Lions.

Goalie Cheri McMonagle turned back four Delaware shots and Penn State outshot Delaware 30-16 in the contest.

The Lady Lions should get a breather tomorrow when they host Rutgers at 1 p.m. at Lady Lion Field. Penn State has never lost to the Lady Knights, posting a 9-0 series record. Still, Scheetz said her team will not take Rutgers lightly, and will expect the Lady Knights to run the ball.

"I expect more of a running game from Rutgers," Scheetz said. "Our defense will have to be ready."

Laxers seek respect against Rutgers

By ROB BIERTEMPEL

Penn State's Dave Collins (18) looks downfield for an open teammate as a Townsend opponent prepares to challenge in a game against Towson State earlier this season at Pollock Field. The Lions (5-2) face No. 5 Rutgers (6-1) at 2 p.m. Saturday at Pollock Field.

Respect is something that all teams strive for, but it is something that must be earned over the course of a season. It can be gained by hard work, consistent play, or by a strong upset of a powerhouse opponent.

The men's lacrosse team will attempt to earn the respect of its peers when it faces No. 5 Rutgers at 2 p.m. Saturday at Pollock Field. For the Lions (5-2), the game represents a chance to prove themselves worthy of consideration for a national ranking and could provide a boost to carry them through the rest of the season.

Rutgers (6-1) will be Penn State's stiffest challenge to date, as the Scarlet Knights play an aggressive, physical brand of defense that the Lions will have to handle. Lion Head Coach Glenn Thiel is impressed with the play of the Scarlet Knights but feels confident that his team can handle the pressure.

"They are a pressure defensive team with an excellent goal," he said. "We have done well against pressure defenses but I think we'll see a different type than we saw with Syracuse (a 19-4 Lion loss)."

"Rutgers is certainly on a roll. They have quality midfielders and three good attackers. They belong in the top five and maybe should be ranked higher."

Leading the way for the Scarlet Knights is junior attacker Ed Trubisky, who has tallied 14 goals and 10 assists in six games. Trubisky is not alone in making life rough on opposing goalies, as his sidesticks consist of a trio of talented senior midfielders. Dave DiStasio (13 goals, two assists), Tim Donovan (11 goals, three assists) and Gregg Reid (eight goals, six assists) have each come through critical times during the season to provide both offensive power and leadership.

In the cage for Rutgers, will be sophomore Jim Gilman, who has made 59 saves while allowing just 40 goals for a 59.6 saves percentage.

For Penn State, four players continued to dominate the scoring and statistics. Freshman attacker John Quinn (nine goals, 14 assists) to put the heat on the opposition.

The Lions are hoping the combination of concentration and determination can pull them through for their fourth straight win and will avenge last season's 13-3 loss to the Scarlet Knights.

LION NOTES: Rutgers holds the edge in the season series against Penn State, 33-5. . . . The Scarlet Knights are coached by former Penn State two-time honorable mention All-American Tom Hayes.

Tom Watson, once the outstanding player in the game but now trying to fight his way out of a two-year non-winning streak, scored an eagle-three and was tied at 70 with Tom Kite, Bob Tway and an international trio of Australian Greg Norman, Canadian Dave Barr and Tommy Nakajima of Japan.

"It was a difficult day to play," Kratzert said. "Fortunately, I putted as well as anyone can put."

Gary Koch, who battled back from a string of three consecutive bogeys, and T.C. Chen, the slender Taiwanese who almost won the U.S. Open last year, each were a single shot off the lead at 69.

"The fastest greens I've ever seen," said Kite, often a challenger here. "I was playing with Curtis Strange and I saw him tap a putt that wouldn't have gone six inches on routine, vanilla green. He was 15 feet away and the putt went six feet by. It was incredible. Unbelievable."

Seve Ballesteros of Spain, a two-time Masters winner; PGA champion Hubert Green, no relation to the fast-talking Ken Green; and Ben Crenshaw were among the group at 71. Also at that figure were Corey Pavin, Danny Edwards and Roger Maltbie.

Flyers' early spurt fells Rangers, 2-1

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Ron Sutter and Brad McCrimmon scored 11 seconds apart in the first period to trigger the Philadelphia Flyers to a 2-1 victory over the New York Rangers last night and even their best-of-five, first-round NHL Stanley Cup series at one game each.

The Patrick Division champion Flyers, who were upset by the fourth-place Rangers in the opener Wednesday night, showed why they were the top defensive team in the league, holding New York to 12 shots while peppering goaltender John Vanbiesbroeck with 44.

Flyers goalie Bob Froese, who led the National Hockey League in goals against, saves and shutouts and tied for most victories (31) with Vanbiesbroeck in the regular season, won his first playoff game in his four-year career. He had lost four, including the opener of this series.

The Flyers now head for New York where they will try to regain the lead in the edge in the third game at Madison Square Garden tomorrow night. Game Four also is at the Garden.

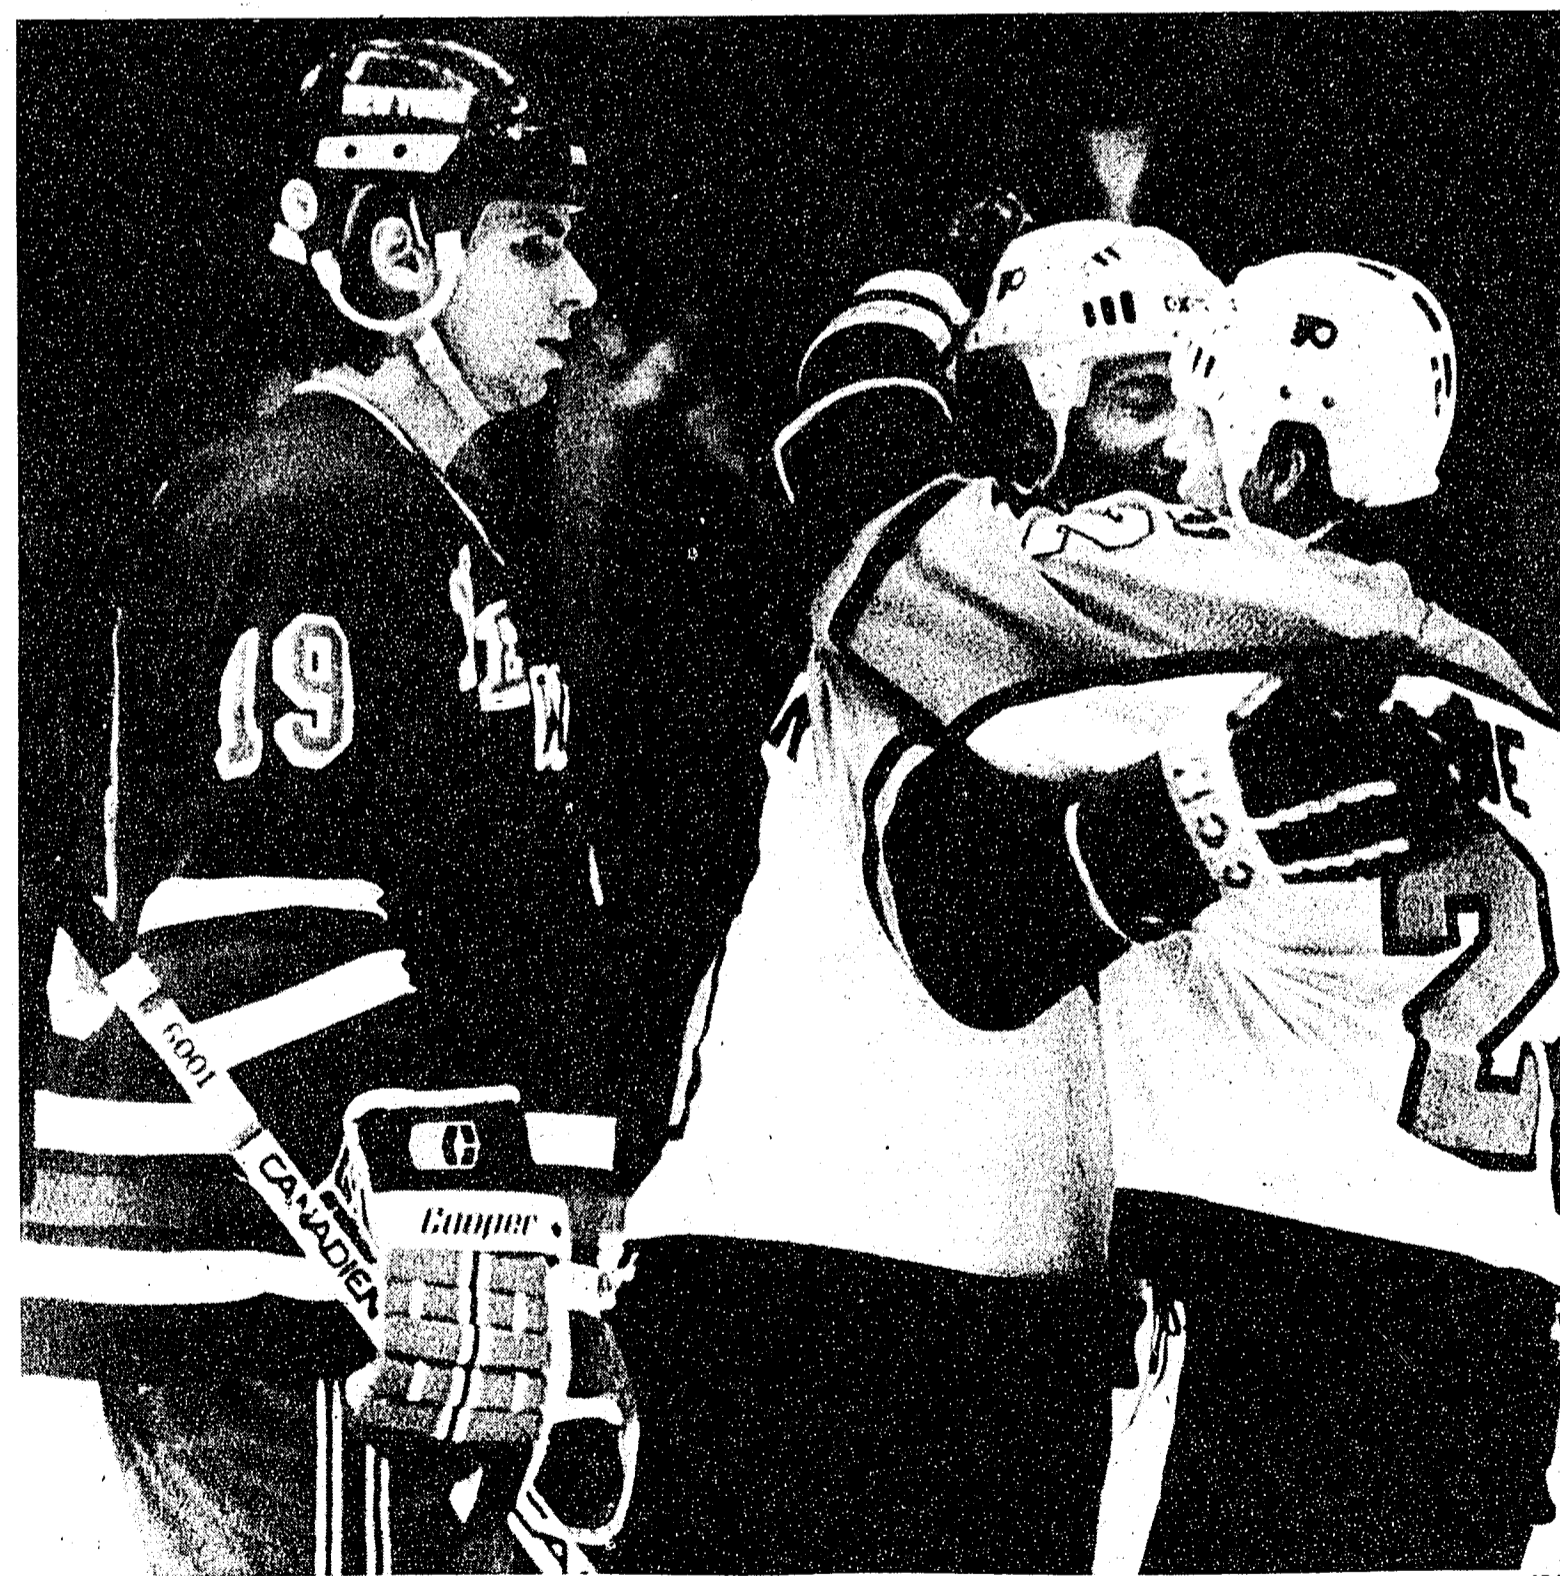

The Flyers took their first period 2-0 lead as they outshot the Rangers 21-3.

Just 11 seconds later Brad McCrimmon backhanded a shot 20 feet into the far corner to make it 2-0 at 11:10 of the opening period.

The Flyers' 21 first-period shots erased an old club mark of 20 set April 28, 1976, against Toronto and equaled May 1, 1980 against Minnesota.

The Rangers cut it to 2-1 after just 49 seconds of the second period as Pierre Larouche scored from 30 feet, Froese again slipping to the ice in an effort to save the power-play goal.

The Flyers again outshot the Rangers with 11 for a two-period total of 32 against six for New York and a total of nine. Most of the play in the period was in the zone of the Rangers, who finished fourth in the Patrick Division with an offense that was 20th in the 21-team league.

Philadelphia's Mark Howe (2) congratulates teammate Rich Sutter, middle, after his first-period goal while dejected New York Ranger Mark Osborne (19) looks on. Eleven seconds after Sutter's goal, Brad McCrimmon scored to give the Flyers a 2-1 victory over the Rangers.

Capitals 5, Islanders 2
LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Defenseman Scott Stevens had one goal and two assists and Bob Gould scored twice as the Washington Capitals defeated the New York Islanders 5-2 last night and took a 2-0 lead in the best-of-five NHL playoff series.

The Caps, who have been eliminated by the Islanders in each of the past three playoffs, will have a chance to complete a sweep when the series resumes on New York's home ice Saturday night. Washington led last year's first-round playoff series between the teams 2-0 but then lost three straight games.

After assisting on Washington's first two goals, Stevens snapped a 2-2 tie with a blue line slapshot at 18:35 of the second period, just nine seconds after Bryan Trotter scored for the Islanders.

Gould added a goal for the Capitals just 58 seconds into the third period when he tipped in a rebound of a shot by Steve Leach. Gould was being pushed in front of goalie Billy Smith by defenseman Randy Boyd.

Gould scored his second goal into an empty net with 15 seconds remaining.

AUGUSTA, Ga. — Ken Green, who describes himself as "kind of a laid-back sort of guy," and Bill Kratzert shot a Sunday 86 yesterday to tie for the opening-round lead in the 50th Masters golf tournament.

Putting did it for both of them on a day that the Augusta National Golf Club course was raked by a gusty, shifting wind.

"What can I say? So I made a few putts, four or five no-brainers," said Green after holing out four times from 35 to 70 feet to share the lead in the first of the year's four major tests of golfing greatness.
