Libya claims it moved foreigners to oil fields

TRIPOLI, Libya — Col. Moammar Khadafy's government claimed yesterday it had moved foreign workers, including U.S. citizens, to oil fields in the desert and army bases purportedly targeted for attack by American forces.

But a Western diplomat told The Associated Press he had spoken to several representatives of his country in Libya, and "none of them reported any such incident." He spoke on condition he not be identified by name or country.

Tripoli has remained quiet for days, and there were no signs yesterday of any military preparations.

The U.S. 6th Fleet was meanwhile poised in the Mediterranean off Libya, awaiting President Reagan's decision on a possible strike in retaliation for Khadafy's reputed support of international terrorism.

A statement released by a Libyan Information Department official, who refused to be identified, said, "Foreign workers have been forced to live in them (oil fields) in order to account that the majority are Americans."

Diplomats and business people estimate 800 Americans still live in Libya, including executives, oil field workers and about 100 American women married to Libyans.

Winnie Mandela, anti-apartheid activist and hero of many black youths, is mobbed as she attends a meeting in the black township of Kagiso, west of Johannesburg, yesterday. Mandela attended three political meetings in the Johannesburg area yesterday.

Winnie Mandela says apartheid will end with stones

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Black activist Winnie Mandela said yesterday that Blacks in South Africa will win their freedom this year with stones, matches and gasoline.

In three separate, fiery speeches, Winnie Mandela said South Africa's Blacks were fighting a far more heavily armed white-led government, but that "the power is in our hands — we have people's power." Blacks outnumber Whites in South Africa 24 million to 5 million.

Meanwhile, arsonists set fire to several huts yesterday in Mooiplaas, a black township near East London in eastern Cape Province, burning to death three black men, police said. The did not say what caused the clash and did not identify the victims.

Police headquarters also said a patrol shot dead an 18-year-old black man during a stone-throwing attack on police early yesterday in the black township of Katlehong, east of Johannesburg.

Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., said Saturday he was invited to the White House today to discuss possible action against Libya.

president of the United Democratic Front's branch in northern Transvaal Province, died in police custody in the Lebowa tribal homeland. Authorities did not confirm this.

In the last 19 months, black activists have often attacked other Blacks seen as collaborators with the white government. On the other hand, vigilantes who support the government have increasingly attacked and killed anti-apartheid activists.

Winnie Mandela, the wife of jailed black activist Nelson Mandela, spoke to crowds in Soweto, the black township southwest of Johannesburg where she lives, and in Kagiso and Munsieville, black areas about 20 miles west of Johannesburg.

The speeches were Winnie Mandela's first since her lawyers said recent court rulings had barred her from making political addresses.

In remarks filmed by foreign television crews, Winnie Mandela said: "We have no guns — we

Bush discusses retaliation

WASHINGTON, D.C. (AP) — Vice President George Bush said yesterday that "Libyans have their fingerprints all over state-sponsored terrorism," and the United States has a duty to punish those who threaten Americans overseas.

Deputy Secretary of State John C. Whitehead said U.S. officials had information implicating Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy in the bombing of a West Berlin nightclub in which an American was killed and indicating that Khadafy was plotting more such attacks.

President Reagan is weighing the use military force against Libya in retaliation for the attack, Whitehead said, but added, "the prospect of military action is something that only the president will decide on. He has not yet made that decision."

Reagan last week indicated his willingness to take military action if the perpetrators could be identified and an appropriate target located.

cause professors are generally expected to do their work along with teaching."

Jayne Miller, WBAL-TV news reporter in Baltimore, Md., and a 1976 University graduate, told students that a "desperate void" exists of good writers in the broadcasting industry.

Miller also said that a good background in journalism education and experience is very important. She reminded students that the biggest television news concern today is the fear of libel.

"Those with a good education in journalism are most likely to avoid libel charges," she said.

"The secret to being successful in journalism," Miller added, "is to always make it look like you know what you're talking about."

Graves symbolizing the plight of South Africa were erected Thursday morning next to the shantytown to protest violence in South Africa. Attempts to dismantle the graveyard, built by the Committee for Justice in South Africa, were reported by police this weekend.

Trouble at graveyard, police say

Two attempts to dismantle the "graveyard" built on Henderson Mall by investment supporters to protest the University's investments in South Africa were reported by University Police Services Saturday.

In the first attack, John Douglas Drake, 220 N. Burrows Rd., was cited at 4:45 p.m. Saturday by police for disorderly conduct. Drake, after shouting at the shantytown protesters, allegedly picked up two crosses from the graveyard and smashed them together, breaking one, police said.

Drake was part of a group of seven males but was the only one cited for disorderly conduct, police said.

In a second incident the same day, a police cadet apprehended a male sometime Saturday evening for apparently attempting to remove crosses from the graveyard and put them in a nearby garbage can, police said.

The male caught dumping the crosses was not cited but was referred to the Office of Student Conduct for possible disciplinary action, police said.

The graveyard was built by the Black Student Coalition Against Racism and the Committee for Justice in South Africa Thursday morning to protest the violence in South Africa and the University's investments in the riot-torn nation.

Friday afternoon, an unidentified male called the Undergraduate Student Government offices in the HUB and threatened to burn down the shantytown outside Willard Building, police said. The call was apparently unrelated to the incidents this weekend.

Liberal arts valuable for careers in communication, speakers say

By BRENDA FOSTER
Collegian Staff Writer

A liberal arts education can give students a definite advantage in the search for a career in communications, according to two University alumni and a University professor speaking as part of the 14th annual Liberal Arts Career Day.

The discussion was one of eight sponsored by the Liberal Arts Alumni Association Thursday.

Robert W. Steventon, a 1970 University graduate and vice president of Marketing General Inc., Alexandria, Va., assured students that a liberal arts education is what employers are looking for when they recruit. Students with liberal arts backgrounds can look at a problem from all sides, Steventon said.

Along with a broad liberal arts education, Steventon stressed the need for students to gain some on-the-job experience through an internship.

"In order to start directly into your desired profession, it helps to have an internship on your repertoire," Steventon said.

Bernard Asbell, University associate professor of English and former president of the American Society of Journalists and Writers, warned students that money should not be considered a major factor if they desire careers in writing or editing.

Asbell told students that the best approach to a writing career is to go to graduate school and become a professor of English.

"That way," said Asbell, "you will be allowed to set aside time for your writing while earning a living be-
