

Feldman hopes to stabilize fencers

By MEGAN CULHANE
Collegian Sports Writer

When an electron leaves the orbital path of an atom, it inevitably becomes unstable. And for the men's fencing team, the departure of graduating captain Brian Keane may be the loss that starts it down the road to instability.

Adam Feldman, the newly-appointed captain and national champion foil fencer, will follow in Keane's footsteps. Feldman realizes the loss of Keane, an outstanding sabreur, will weaken the team's depth at that division, but he does not see that loss as a cause for instability in the team's nucleus.

"I think the only kind of pressure I'm going to have, is to follow in Brian's footsteps," Feldman said. "The nucleus of the team is back. They have the (NCAA) experience, and with that comes consistency."

However, following up a 12-2 season, in which the Lions only losses were to arch-rivals Columbia and Notre Dame, will be a tough job for the team. The foilist is determined to do his best to improve on this past season's record, and will look for help from division captains Matt Glick (foil), George Poslusny (epee), and Peter Cox (sabre).

"It's through these guys that I'll get a lot of my help," Feldman said. "Maybe I'd be a better leader behind the scenes than in front of the troops. I like to lead the cavalry too, but I like to have somebody next to me."

Feldman feels next year's team will possess many of the strong attributes that earned it the No. 3 ranking this year.

And if the fencers had a lucky number it would surely be three. The Lions placed third in the NCAA Championships, marking the third consecutive year the team captured a top five spot. The Lions sent three outstanding freshman to represent them at this year's NCAAs, and produced three All-American athletes in Keane, Feldman and Cox.

Keane will be the only All-American the team will lose. No one wants to leave a position, or a team, they have worked hard to build into a force and Keane shares those feelings.

"Straight from the beginning I told (my teammates) that you have to have the will to win, you have to want to win and at the same time you will try to fill that gap in his role as next year's sabre division captain.

Even when the cards were down in a few tournaments they still came together and did what they had to do. And they listened."

With the loss of Keane comes a serious deficit in the depth of the sabre squad. Freshman Cox will try to fill that gap in his role as next year's sabre division captain.

Softball team falters in Lady Lion Invite

By MIKE FRASSINELLI
Collegian Sports Writer

If the women's softball team could have subtracted an inning of its choice over every game it played over the weekend in the Lady Lion Invitational, the squad would have emerged undefeated.

But things don't work that way, so the Lady Lions (15-20) dropped five of six games and finished in seventh place in the eight-team tournament won by Central Michigan.

"We just always seem to have one bad inning every game and that's when we lose it," shortstop Nan Schilling said.

Penn State's first game of the tournament — on Friday against Eastern Illinois — was a sign of things to come.

The game remained scoreless through four innings, but the Lady Lions surrendered three runs in the fifth to lose, 3-0.

Penn State's second game on Friday — against Rhode Island — proved to be a gentleman and represent Penn State," Keane said. "All season long the've done

"We have to work on hitting for situations," Head Coach Sue Rankin said. "We're hitting — but that's not clutch hitting."

Penn State ended Friday with a 0-3 record after losing the next game to Central Michigan, 10-1. Three Penn State errors helped the Chippewas to nine runs in the second.

However, the Lady Lions rebounded from Friday's sub-par showing to post a victory over Ohio State in the first round of the consolation bracket on Saturday, 5-3.

Sichler (three hits and two RBIs), Devaney (two hits, two RBIs), Withstandley (two hits, one RBI) and Schilling (two hits) accounted for all of the Lady Lion offense, while Devin struck out two allowed only one walk and seven hits to pick up the win.

A heart-breaking extra-inning loss to Rhode Island (3-2, in eight innings) in the next game was indicative of the way things went for Penn State throughout the tournament.

With the game tied 2-2 after regulation, a tournament rule designed to speed up games was put into effect. The hitter who made the last out in the previous inning was placed on first and second base to start the next inning.

With the Wram runner on second, Val Gorman reared on a fielder's choice to put runners on first and second with no outs. Polans then got a key strikeout when she fanned.

Rhode Island's top hitter, Tracy Turner. With a full count on the next to third on a wild pitch. Devaney then reached base after getting hit by a pitch, but both runners were stranded.

games in Houston. The Kings, with guards Jeff Malone and Gus Williams could give Washington an upset, but Charles Barkley, Julius Erving and Maurice Cheeks proved in the closing weeks of the season that the 76ers are a formidable foe even without Malone. Philadelphia in four.

Atlanta (4) vs. Detroit (5) — Beating their seeding positions, this should be the best of the Eastern Conference pairings. Dominique Wilkins, who had a NBA season-high 57 points last Thursday to take control of a close individual scoring race with Adrian Dantley and Alex English, took more than two many shots as any of his teammates. But Randy Wittman, Kevin Willis, Glenn Rivers and 5-foot-6 rookie reserve Spud Webb all proved they could have outstanding performance during the Hawks' team record-equalling 50-win season. Detroit, with more playoff experience and Isiah Thomas, Kelly Tripucka and rebounding champion Bill Laimbeer, should have an edge.

Denver (3) vs. Portland (6) — The Nuggets are even worse than Houston on the road, finishing 13-23, which makes them vulnerable if they slip at home. But the Trail Blazers, who finished 22 games behind the Lakers in the Pacific Division and had a 12-game losing streak in February, are just plain vulnerable since losing defensive standout Sam Bowie with a leg injury. After giving up an aging Caldwell Johnson to the Celtics, coach Jack Ramsay moved Nychal Coach from forward to the middle.

Dallas (4) vs. Utah (5) — Utah's Darrell Griffith missed the entire holiday season with a foot injury. The Lakers, who coasted to a 62-20 record after leading the division by more than 10 games since the All-Star break, have everyone healthy and are anxious to start defending their title. Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who turns 39 tomorrow, continues to lead the way.

Houston (2) vs. Sacramento (7) — This series could be tougher than Rockets fans expect, especially if the Kings can avoid losing their first two
