Manion nomination in two-week limbo

By JAMES ROWLEY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The Senate voted 48-46 yesterday to confirm Daniel Manion for a federal appeals court judgeship, but the appointment was left in parliamentary limbo until a second vote after Congress' two-week recess.

"Manion is not a judge today," opponent Sen. Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Del., told reporters after the inconclusive vote on President Reagan's nominee to the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

A vote to reconsider the appointment was forced by Manion's opponents but further action was put off until next month. The dramatic roll-call vote was apparently preceded by heavy last minute White House lobbying.

Sen. Slade Gorton, R-Wash., later confirmed in a statement that he voted for Manion after assurances that the Justice Department would clear for presidential nomination a judicial candidate he supports.

Vice President George Bush rushed to the Senate chamber after the roll-call began in case he was needed to cast a tie-breaking vote.

Opponents, including dozens of some 40 law schools, have contended that Manion is professionally unqualified for the federal bench.

With the vote 48-47 against Manion, Sen. Dan Quayle, R-Indiana, Manion's chief backer, persuaded Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kansas, to withdraw her "No" vote to force a 47-47 tie.

Senate Minority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., then switched his "No" vote to "Yes," robbing Bush of the chance to cast a tie-breaking vote for Manion. By joining the 46 majority, Byrd also enabled himself under the Senate's rules to move to reconsider the vote. Only someone who voted with the majority can make a motion to reconsider.

Specter votes 'no' a 2nd time

By JEFF BARKER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., again cast a "No" vote against one of President Reagan's federal judge nominees, becoming one of only four Republicans to oppose the appointment of conservative Daniel Manion yesterday.

Pennsylvania's other Republican senator, John Heinz, voted for Manion.

Manion's nomination caused an unusually strong protest from civil liberty, civil rights and public interest groups as well as from some lawyers and law school deans and faculty members.

Opponents have attacked Manion on two fronts, saying his legal ability is insufficient for a position one rung below the Supreme Court and that his right-wing beliefs are so extreme that he would not follow Supreme Court directives he dislikes. Manion's father, Clarence, was a founder of the ultraconservative John Birch Society.

Specter also voted against Manion on May 8 in the Judiciary Committee, but he voted the same day to send the nomination to the Senate floor without recommendation, saying that all of his colleagues deserved the chance to consider the matter.

At the time, Specter said he opposed Manion because "I believe that the views he has expressed on the autonomy, integrity, and proper role of the federal judiciary, including the Supreme Court, are incompatible with service as a federal judge."

Yesterday, Specter joined 42 Democrats and 3 other Republicans in voting against Manion.

Curfew imposed on 11 more black townships

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The government put 11 more black townships under curfew yesterday and said residents who were found with slingshots or similar devices would be arrested.

A curfew imposed June 19 on dozens of townships around Port Elizabeth in eastern Cape Province forbade the wearing of anti-apartheid T-shirts.

The latest 10 p.m. to 4 a.m. curfew applies to townships in the north of Orange Free State province.

Union officials said the government, giving no reasons, had freed a dozen labor leaders detained without charge under the state of emergency proclaimed June 12. Dozens still are held.

Louis Nel, deputy information minister, called the explosion and two bombings that wounded 19 people in Johannesburg earlier this week a "callous attempt by the ANC to commit terror."

Five more Blacks were slain in the 24 hours ending at dawn yesterday, two by police firing at rioters and three by other Blacks, the government reported. That raised the number of people killed since the emergency declaration to 66.

According to the government's Bureau for Information, the only source of official reports under the emergency, there were no strikes or other black protests yesterday, the 31st anniversary of the signing of the Freedom Charter.

All major anti-apartheid groups, including the ANC, approved the charter on June 26, 1955, as a blueprint for a non-racial South Africa.

A land mine exploded in a black township near Pretoria, damaging a truck but not injuring the black driver.

Business executives, and labor leaders who went underground to escape arrest, have said industrial relations were being seriously damaged by the crackdown. Some workers have staged strikes to protest the arrests.

House panel votes to strip funds, end Civil Rights Comm.

WASHINGTON, D.C. (AP) — The House Appropriations Committee, in a protest of the way the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights has operated under Reagan administration leadership, voted yesterday to eliminate all money for the agency and shut it down.

The vote in the Democratic-controlled panel was 27-16, generally along party lines. If the full House goes along with the decision, chances for approval would be considered slim in the Republican-run Senate.

President Reagan, who often has voiced support for the commission's conservative majority, would be certain to oppose the plan.

Under the fund elimination proposal by Rep. Julian C. Dixon, D-Calif., the commission's $11.8 million appropriation could only be used "to close down the operations . . . by Dec. 31, 1986."

Democrats said they disagreed with the commission's turnaround since a conservative majority took control in January 1984, but they also cited other factors for the vote.

One was a General Accounting Office report that said the agency mismanaged its personnel and record-keeping. Another was the contention that the commission produced little work and ignored specific activities ordered by Congress.

But Commission Chairman Clarence M. Pendleton Jr. and Republicans on the committee countered that the dispute was ideological, reflecting disagreement with the philosophy of the commission majority.

Pendleton, in his statements, and the commission — in its official votes — have infuriated the major civil rights groups.

There has been bitter opposition to race- and sex-based quotas, goals and timetables; statements against school busing; opposition to a cutoff of funds to entire institutions that discriminate; and Pendleton's comment that equal pay for jobs of equal status was the wackiest idea since the "Looney Tunes" cartoons.

Blown over
A van carefully maneuvers past utility poles toppled by Hurricane Bonnie yesterday. The storm struck the Gulf Coast before dawn with flogging fury, killing two people with its 85 mph winds and heavy rain that spun off tornadoes, destroyed homes and knocked out power to thousands. Bonnie, the first hurricane of the season, weakened and died not long after it came ashore near the Texas-Louisiana border.

Grand jury indicts Shearson Lehman

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A federal grand jury yesterday indicted Shearson Lehman Bros. Inc., the nation's second largest brokerage house, and seven individuals on charges they were involved in a gambling and money-laundering scheme.

Included among the seven was Joseph Mastromanno Jr., son-in-law of former Philadelphia Mayor Frank Rizzo.

U.S. Attorney Edward Dennis said the operation yielded about $1.2 million in profits a year. The indictment covered the period September 1982 to July 1985.

The money-laundering portion was headed by Herbert L. Cantley, who was sales manager of the Philadelphia office for Shearson Lehman, the indictment said.

Dennis said gross receipts from the betting were estimated at $1 million per week, and that the profits were turned over to Cantley, who then converted the cash into other easily negotiable instruments, such as cashier's checks, through the brokerage house.

Dennis said Shearson Lehman, a subsidiary of American Express, was charged because Cantley was an employee, and used his position in the firm to launder money. But he said no other individuals are expected to be indicted in the ongoing investigation.

The indictment includes 63 counts of conspiracy, illegal gambling, failure to file currency transaction reports required by federal law of brokers, and concealment.

Riverside involved in proxy fight

JOHNSTOWN (AP) — A union representing 3,500 Penn Traffic Co. employees is siding with management in a proxy fight with an investment group for control of the company, an issue to be decided by shareholders at a meeting today.

Both Penn Traffic, which operates Riverside and Quality Markets food stores in Pennsylvania and New York, and the challengers, MTH Co., have been soliciting support from shareholders.

The United Food and Commercial Workers Union took an ad in yesterday's Johnstown Tribune-Democrat urging shareholders to vote with management. Union officials said they acted out of concern that a leveraged buyout could lead to fewer jobs at the company.

Creation '86 begins in Shireleysburg

SHIRELEYSBURG, (AP) — The scaffolding towering over the stage, 25-foot video screen, and screaming fans spelled hard rock concert, but for more than 17,000 people gathered yesterday for the opening of Creation '86, the difference was the message.

Nestled in the gently sloped mountains of central Pennsylvania, the three-day outdoor event is billed as the country's largest Christian rock concert.

Organizers expect nearly 30,000 people by the time the camping-music-ministry extravaganza ends Saturday night.

The "contemporary Christian music" concert, held at the 50-acre Agape Campground in Huntingdon County, has attracted fundamentalists from California to Maine to Ontario, Canada, and the likes of 1950s rock-and-roller Dion DiMucci of "Dion and the Belmonts" fame.

Organizers of the eight-year-old festival acknowledge criticism that such rock music isn't traditionally Christian, but said it's valuable because of the message it gets across to young people.

AT&T workers back on job

WASHINGTON, D.C. (AP) — A 26-day strike against American Telephone & Telegraph Co. by 155,000 members of the Communications Workers of America ended yesterday, and long-distance operators, installers and production workers were told to return to work at the beginning of the midnight shift.

Final accord on a new three-year contract came at mid-afternoon when the union and company came to terms on scheduling, lengths of shift and other work rules for the men and women who sell, install and maintain AT&T telephone equipment.

The terms of the basic national contract were agreed to June 17, but the union was adamant that no one would return to work until all of the unit issues were resolved.

The agreement will be submitted to the workers for a secret ratification vote Aug. 4, but they will work in the meantime.

W. Va. guards open fire on inmates

MOUNDSVILLE, W.Va. (AP) — Guards opened fire on a dozen knife-wielding inmates at the West Virginia Penitentiary on yesterday, wounding four prisoners, officials said.

Corrections Commissioner A.V. Dodrill said the disturbance began about 2:20 p.m. when a dozen inmates from the high-security North Hall section of the prison refused to follow guards' instructions.

Among the inmates in North Hall are more than 60 inmates officials say were ringleaders in a New Year's Day riot, in which three prisoners were killed and 16 workers taken hostage.

Dodrill said yesterday's disturbance began when a group of prisoners was outside exercising and cell doors were opened to allow a second group out to shower. He said 12 prisoners stepped outside their cells, then refused to close the doors behind them as required.

He said officers in full riot gear were called in about 2:45 p.m. Dodrill said as the officers approached, one inmate threw them fire filled with an unknown substance. One or two officers then fired shotguns filled with buckshot, four inmates were hit.

No guards were injured, officials said.

Dodrill said the officers acted properly.

Earlier, Don M. Ervin, the corrections department's chief of community operations, had said the disturbance began when inmates in the yard for an exercise period refused to return to the prison building.

Soviets hint summit prospects dim

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet commentaries yesterday indicated that the state of U.S.-Soviet relations has so deteriorated that prospects for a summit this year are dim unless there are major policy changes in Washington.

The commentaries were the first major reaction by the state-run press to President Reagan's speech last week in Glassboro, N.J.

After his speech, Reagan met the new Soviet ambassador to Washington, Yuri Dubinin. The issue of a summit meeting with Mikhail S. Gorbachev was discussed but details were not made public.

In Rome, Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Vladimir Petrovski said yesterday that the United States wants the second summit set for December.

The Novosti press agency distributed commentaries to Western reporters in Moscow yesterday by two of its top political analysts. Both commentaries gave a negative reaction to Reagan's speech.

One, by Yuri Kornilov, concluded that the "spirit of Geneva" that surrounded the November summit is dead.

Kornilov said the Soviet Union wants a summit but two factors are lacking to allow it: "an appropriate political climate" and a willingness to translate into practice the two leaders' pledges not to seek military superiority.

Commentator Spartak Beglov said Reagan's speech had produced contradictory assessments in the West — that he was conciliatory, that he was trying to ease the shock of his announcement about disregarding SALT II and that he wanted the benefits of a summit without making any commitments.

Meanwhile, the official news agency Tass said that the conclusion of the fifth round U.S.-Soviet arms control talks in Geneva yesterday shows the United States must revise its positions.
