

Five to face trial on drug charges

By TERRY MUYCHLER
Collegian Staff Writer

Five of nine men, including three University students, charged last week for drug-related offenses are scheduled to stand trial in the Centre County Court of Common Pleas sometime next year.

The nine arrests made by the State College Bureau of Police Services and University Police Services stemmed from a 10-month investigation which netted about $10,000 in the drug bust.

At preliminary hearings held Wednesday, District Justice Robert Shoff decided that the Commonwealth had sufficient evidence to merit a trial next February or March against Douglas Dockray, 22, 725 Briarwood; Curtis Mitchell, 22, 392-C Vairo Blvd., and Jeremy Wright, 21, 144 N. Patterson St. Also scheduled to stand trial are 21-year-old Francis Wlodarczyk of 725-B Whitehall Road and 22-year-old Abdul Alexander, an inmate at Centre County Prison. Both waived their rights to preliminary hearings.

"(By waiving the hearings) they're consenting that the Commonwealth has enough evidence against them for a trial," said a spokesman in the Court Administrator's office.

Assistant Director of University Safety Tom Harmon said he expects more drug-related arrests to come out of the investigation, but at a slower rate.

"They are just gonna trickle in now," Harmon said.

Dockray (senior-mechanical engineering) is charged with one count of criminal conspiracy, possession and possession with intent to deliver a controlled substance.

Mitchell, (junior-economics) is charged with possession and possession with intent to deliver a controlled substance.

Wright, (junior-hotel, restaurant and institution management) is charged with selling a non-controlled substance representing it as a controlled substance.

Alexander and Wlodarczyk were charged with drug related charges. Preliminary hearings for Thomas G. Crane, George Lopez, and Robert Mueller Jr. are scheduled for next Wednesday at 1 p.m.

Crane, 21, of 234 Fulton St., is charged with three counts each of possession of a controlled substance and possession with intent to deliver.

Lopez, 23, (senior-computer science) of 300 S. Atherton St., is charged with possession and possession with intent to deliver a controlled substance.

Mueller, of Bellefonte, is charged with criminal conspiracy.

Charges against 21-year-old Richard Vetovich, of Coraopolis were withdrawn by State College police. Vetovich was charged with possession, manufacturing and possession of drug paraphernalia.

Neither State College Police Lt. Jack Orndorf nor the arresting officer could be reached for comment on why the charges were dropped against Vetovich.

Candidate cites need for jobs in Pa.

By ALEXANDRA S. PURNELL
 Collegian Staff Writer

Al Brelo describes himself as a popular man in Centre County as he challenges Republican incumbent J. Doyle Corman in the race for state Senate in the 34th District.

Brelo, a Phillipsburg native, said he is refusing to take any campaign contributions from anyone, including his own Democratic Party.

He said the party never offered him any money but said, "if they did have any money to spare, I wouldn't have wanted it anyway. I'm not too close with the party," Brelo said.

The Democratic nominee is a former construction worker in central Pennsylvania and he does not want to be affiliated with any political organization, he said.

Brelo admits that he is not a typical politician. Currently unemployed, Brelo applied for the office of District Magistrate in 1981 and briefly pursued the 23rd Congressional District seat in 1982. He failed in both attempts for political office.

He only campaigns on a door-to-door basis, saying that he has done a lot of campaigning in Centre, Clearfield, and Clinton counties.

"I'm certain I'll beat Corman in Clearfield County and part of Clinton County," Brelo said.

Brelo emphasized the need to bring jobs back into Pennsylvania, something he does not think his opponent has been doing. The Democratic challenger cites dissatisfaction with Corman's performance as senator as motivation for his own candidacy.

"He's certainly not a full-time senator," said Brelo, claiming that Corman's business interests interfered with his work in office.

Corman said that his insurance and real estate business, Corman Associates Inc., consumes seven or eight hours a week of his time.

"I think he ought to be trying to bring work in (to Pennsylvania)," Brelo said.

"I'd like to see Interstate 80 made a toll road," he proposed, saying that it would create jobs and raise revenue for the state at the same time. He added that if he were elected his campaign would focus on drawing outside businesses into Pennsylvania.

Corman, who said his opponent "seems to be a fine individual," has served in the state Senate since 1977.

Corman has taken action to help alleviate the unemployment problem in the state. He has served on the Ben Franklin Partnership Board for four years, a committee made up of elected officials, university staff members and private citizens who develop programs for creating new jobs in the state.

Corman, 54, said he works with the local Industrial Development Corporation and was instrumental in saving the Central Pennsylvania School of Nursing in Phillipsburg. He has received endorsements from The Pennsylvanians for Effective Government, The Pennsylvania Sportsmen Coalition and The Association of College and University Professors.

Brelo's incumbent opponent is the chairman of the Senate Transportation Committee and vice chairman of the Local Government Committee. He also sits on the Appropriations, Labor and Industry, and Public Health and Welfare Committees. Education and hazardous waste disposal are his top priorities.

"I'd like to see better funding for Penn State," Brelo said, adding that he would "like to see us do a better job in funding basic education."

"It was the main thing that got me into this to start with," he said. Brelo said he disagrees with the way Corman has dealt with this issue.

"(Corman) said he won't oppose putting nuclear waste in this district," said Brelo.

Corman denied the charge, saying that the only states being considered for nuclear waste disposal are Nevada, Louisiana and Washington. He said only low-level radioactive waste would be stored in Pennsylvania. Favoring state control of hazardous waste sites, he said, "we can provide security if we know there are only a few waste sites in the state."

Brelo said "I don't think (nuclear waste) should be brought here," and later said "There has to be a nuclear waste dump site somewhere in Pennsylvania."

However he added that the state produces more nuclear waste than any other state in the country. He said a nuclear waste dump site should be put "in one of the northern counties that doesn't have much of a population."

Brelo said he would never raise taxes. He would like to see more social security benefits and more financial aid for Penn State students, but only if it could be done without raising taxes.
