Glen Rock man to face drug charges

A Glen Rock man was arrested Thursday night by State College state police at Hills Plaza, South Atherton Street, on charges of possession with the intent to deliver $5,000 worth of marijuana, state police said.

State police said they arrested William Karl Shaw of RD 3, Glen Rock, Pa., with help from State College Bureau of Police Services and University Police Services after a one-month undercover investigation by a state police team, Region IV Strike Force.

Shaw was later arraigned before District Magistrate Robert Shoff in Philipsburg and ordered to stand trial Oct. 29, in Central Court in Bellefonte. Shaw is being held in Centre County prison on $50,000 bail.

Fans settle for I.M. goal posts

By PATRICIA ROACH
Collegian Staff Writer

University Police Services reported that about 350 excited football fans attempted to enter Beaver Stadium after the Penn State-Alabama football game Saturday.

The crowd was gathering to allegedly remove the stadium's goal posts but the athletic department had removed the Beaver Stadium goalposts earlier last week in the event such an attempt would be made, said James Robinson, acting superviser for University Police Services.

"Since they didn't get into the stadium, they decided to go to the intramural field for the goal posts there," Robinson said.

Fans went to the intramural field west of the stadium and took pieces of a goalpost worth about $1,000.

Police said the group deposited one section of the goalpost outside Beaver Stadium.

The remaining two sections were reportedly carried down College Avenue and later left on Old Main Lawn, police said, where they were later found with "minimal" damage.

"We were basically waiting for this to happen from past experience," Robinson said. "When it happened, we were ready."

Two portable toilets in the stadium area were also tipped over in a stadium parking lot, and a gate at the stadium was slightly damaged, police said.

Ag Olympics: a PSU tradition

With the shout "Let the games begin" and the release of multi-colored balloons, another Penn State tradition was underway this weekend.

The Ag Olympics, which included such events as hobby horse hurdles, toy tractor driving and bale tossing, was part of the annual Ag Hill Festival sponsored by the Penn State Agricultural Student Council.

The festival, which began Friday night with a social at Delta Theta Sigma fraternity, 101 N. Patterson St., has changed a great deal over the years.

Jerome Pasto, associate dean of resident education in charge of undergraduate studies from 1969 to 1980, said the Ag Hill Festival was composed of bingo and a dance in Rec Hall in the late 1950s. Potatoes, fruits, meats, Creamery ice cream coupons, and a load of manure for the winner's home garden were the prizes awarded as part of the festivities then, Pasto recalled.

"In the early days, scholarships were awarded before the dance," Pasto said. But that changed because it was too time consuming and too formal for such a upbeat event, he said. Scholarship dinners, therefore, became a separate occasion.

Now, faculty and students compete in games such as the "milk-suckle," where teams drink milk from a quart container, a pint container, a baby bottle, and a bowl with a spoon. In the "Australian Taxi," another game in the competition, a four-person team walked together as one on 2-by-4 foot boards.

The Pre-Vet club created the game "Poor Puppy," in which a team member plays a puppy who gets run over by a truck and is taken to the veterinarian, who fixes his broken leg and takes him to the kennel.

And in the "tractor tire roll," one person rode inside a tire while the other three members rolled him through an obstacle course.

"I just shut my eyes and prayed," said Scott Paul (sophomore-foreign service), as he got out of his tire. Paul was a member of the Lo Bond Scum, the overall winners of the Ag Olympics.

All events were timed and winners were awarded ribbons at a banquet Saturday night at the Ag Arena.

Bob Mikesell (junior-animal production) and Julie Baker (sophomore-animal bioscience) were selected as Mr. and Ms. College of Ag.

Mr. and Ms. College of Ag will act as a liaison between the current students, faculty and the incoming students in the College of Agriculture. They will travel to high schools and farm shows to recruit prospective students for the College of Agriculture.

"Like the Dairy Princess, Mr. and Ms. College of Ag are considered to be Pennsylvania commodity representatives, only they are trying to sell education," said Ellen Cherchuk, Ms. College of Ag 1985-86.
