activities at that university. Despite an official ban, such practices often occur on that campus, the Newsweek article said.

Another hazing scandal surfaced in February, when a fraternity pledge was locked in a room and pelleted with raw eggs, 800 dozen of them, for 72 hours straight, according to the Newsweek article.

During the 1960s and 1970s, when civil rights and the Vietnam War were major preoccupations on campus, hazing largely subsided because of a decline in fraternity membership.

A fraternity at Syracuse University was suspended for 18 months after the pledges were doused with oven cleaner.

At Texas A&M, three students admitted they forced freshman Bruce Goodrich to take part in hours of calisthenics during a cadet-style hazing that caused his death from heat exhaustion.

Yet, after having spoken at 300 universities nationwide during the past seven years, including Penn State three years ago, and at 35 national fraternity conferences, Stevens said "grieks care about hazing, but, sadly, just a few instances bring a blemish to the entire fraternity world."

University Interfraternity Council President Pat Conway said the hazing cases brought out in the media are isolated incidents and are not representative of the hazing practices at all fraternities.

Though a few cases of hazing do exist at the University, hazing is not a problem, Conway said.

Donald Sutt, director of the Office of Conduct Standards, said his office has reviewed two or three cases in which hazing practices during the past 15 years.

He added that University students are reluctant to report such practices.

Until recently, Stevens said, her efforts to publicize hazing casualties have forced university officials to realize that "these rituals are more than a case of 'boys will be boys.'" "During the past seven years, with the great response I have been getting from people, I think it looks very encouraging," Stevens said. "And without a (hazing) law on the books an entire fraternity could not be charged."

No legislation can be a powerful deterrent, Stevens said, but an anti-hazing law does make those accountable for their actions.

In 1983, at the University of Maryland, Gate and Key, a honorary society of fraternity leaders, was banned from campus because of a hazing incident that caused internal bleeding in a new member.

The fraternity members were charged with pressuring the new members to drink a pitcher of beer, causing him to vomit and to tear his esophagus.

Many of the universities' IFCs and Panhellenic Councils, including those at Penn State, have come out in support of state anti-hazing legislation.

Legislation will bring the dangers of hazing to the surface, Stevens said, but "in some cases fraternities cling to this outdated tradition and will go further underground."

New Jersey has a two-level law that calls for a maximum six-month jail term and a $1,000 fine for hazing when no bodily harm is sustained, and up to 18 months in jail and a $7,500 fine for a case where there is serious injury.

Lady spikers brand Cowgirls

By MARK S. MCWHIRTER
Collegian Sports Writer

The No. 13 women's volleyball team branded the Wyoming Cowgirls at Rec Hall last night in four games to advance to the Mid-East Regionals of the NCAA Championship Tournament. The 38-4 Lady Lions will travel to Lincoln, Nebraska on Thursday, providing the heavily-favored Lady Cornhuskers defeat Pittsburgh tomorrow.

Head Coach Russ Rose said Nebraska has caused problems for Penn State teams in recent years in post-season play and that he will work together with his team to drum up a game plan for next week.

"I'm going to have the players decide what they feel was lacking and that is what we're going to approach," Rose said. "I have my own opinion, but they are the one's playing the game. I'm just kind of watching like everyone else."

In the first game of last night's match, Penn State jumped out to an early 8-3 lead, but things stalled somewhat and Wyoming quickly tied the score with five straight points. Co-captain Vida Kernich said the external factors of the game had an effect on her team's play.

"I think that because it was the first round of the playoffs and that we were expected to win since we were at home, we got a little bit tight," Kernich said. "Once we settled down, although we didn't play as well as we could have, we won, so now we're in the playoffs."

The Cowgirls then took the lead, racing off for four more points. But Samantha Johns came into serve for the Lady Lions at 8-12 and brought them back to within two with an ace and another point. A kill by Heidi Pilecki and a hit by Wyoming quickly evened up the score. Two hitting errors by Penn State allowed Wyoming to win the first game, 15-13.

Following the early loss, Rose assembled his team in the middle of the court and said something that must have appealed to his players because they breezed to a 15-2 win in the second game.

"He just said that it was in our hands," Kernich said of Rose's pep talk. "It was the way we were playing, not anything that they were doing."

Hitting errors on the Cowgirls' side of the net were abundant in the second game, but the Lady Lions took advantage of them. In fact, the Cowgirls hit with a surprisingly low team hitting efficiency of a miserable .038 on the night.

Co-captain Ellen Hensler said there was no change in game strategy between games — Penn State just settled down and capitalized on Wyoming's errors.

"We didn't really change our game plan, but I think we all had on the back of our minds that we could play better and that we were going to win," Hensler said.

"It really was just something that was on our side of the net, and we didn't change anything," Kernich added. "We just tried to pull together and said, 'Come on.' We could tell we were better than them."

In game two, the Lady Lions came out strong and assumed a 6-1 early lead. Penn State was then charged with key plays down the stretch.

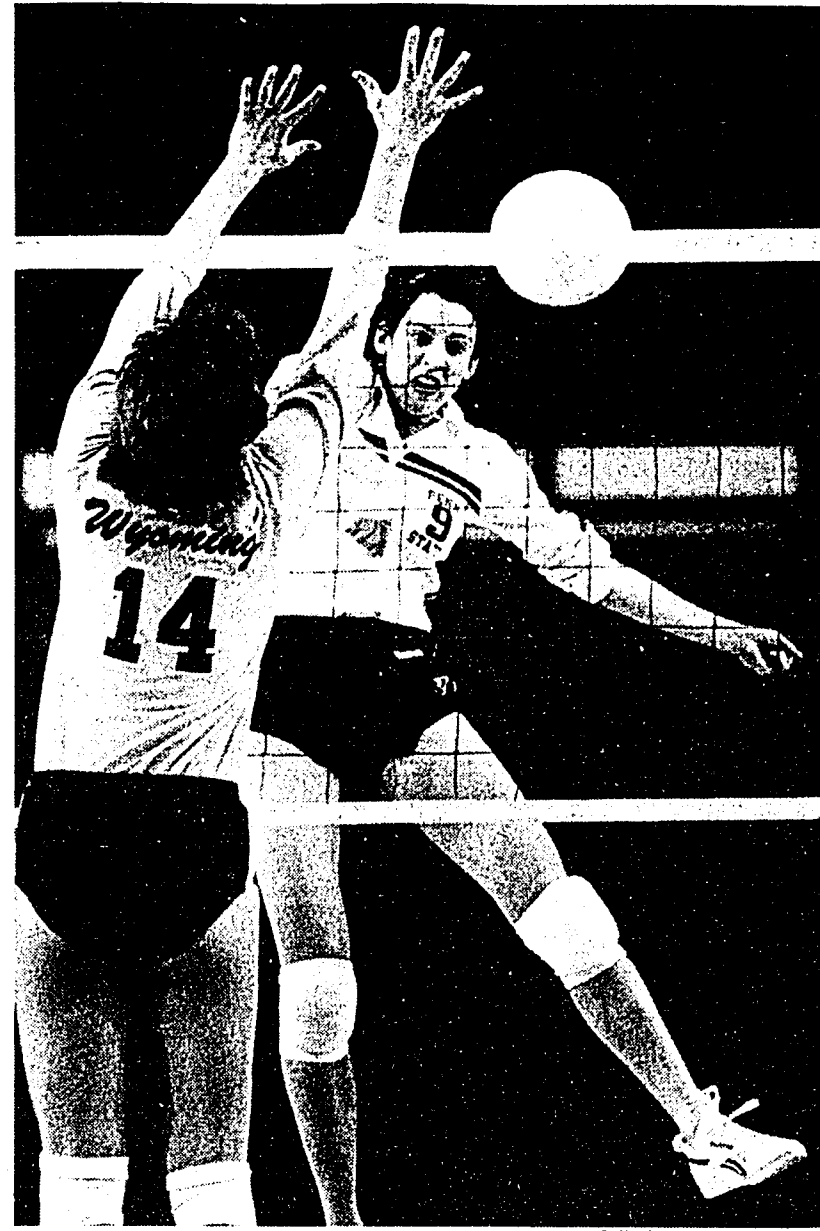

Freshman Bessie Ramirez accounted for several kills and solo blocks for the Lady Lions en route to the lopsided win. Outside hitter Heidi Pilecki also contributed on offense with key plays down the stretch.

With Penn State up 7-4, Johns and Judy McDonough came in on defense and remained on the court until the Lady Lions were up 9-6. Outside hitter Lisa Leap returned to the court, serving an ace and adding a kill to make it 11-6. Penn State then gave up a point on a lift but then swept the next four points to preserve the 15-7 victory.

Game four saw the Lady Lions dominate from start to finish. Pilecki came into her own on offense in game four as she ended up with a dozen kills on the night. Middle hitter Izetta Phillips and Kernich were instrumental on defense throughout the night with 15 digs each. Defensive star Denise Navony was also a key for Penn State in the backcourt with a nine-dig effort on the evening.

Although Penn State did win in four games, Rose was not satisfied with the overall play of his team, and he expressed the need for improvement in the week ahead.

"The only thing I liked about the entire match was the result," he said. "I don't think we played well. I don't think the players that we need to play well come ready to play again next week.

Rose also touched on the fact that his team hasn't performed at its peak at home during the year.

"I don't think we were ready to play," Rose said. "I'd rather be on the road. When you're on the road you're in control. You can tell everybody this is what we're doing and this is when we're doing it and there's nothing else happening."

Next week at the Mid-East Regionals, the Lady Lions will have their hands full with Nebraska (assuming the Lady Cornhuskers win tomorrow).

Cagers' woes continue against Rhode Island

By MARK BRENNAN
Collegian Sports Writer

Any good driver will tell you that the faster you go, the more fuel you use. That may explain why the men's basketball team ran out of gas in the second half of a 75-63 loss to Rhode Island last night in Kingston.

After trailing by as many as 19 points in the first half, the Lions (2-1) put on a furious rally after intermission to take a two-point lead, 52-50, with 7:50 left in the game. But the lead was short lived, as the needle hit empty just over a minute later when the Rams (3-0) took the lead for good.

Although the Lions seemed to be driving at 100 mph during the comeback, Head Coach Bruce Parkhill was hesitant to say that his team "ran out of gas."

"It kind of looked that way, it happened with several minutes to go in the game, and that is along period of time," Parkhill said. "There were a lot of swings in this game. It kind of looked that way because we had a lot of let-downs that enabled them to re-take the lead."

Regardless of how fast Penn State (2-1) was going during the comeback, the deciding factor in the game was the Lions' inability to get the motor started.

Rhode Island controlled the opening tap and on the strength of some hot shooting by guard Tom Garrick and full court man-to-man press, the Rams jumped out to 19-8 lead midway through the first period.

The Lions were plagued by six turnovers during the spurt, with the only Penn State points coming on a three-point play by Tony Ward and a free throw by Brian Allen.

Senior guard Paul Murphy came off of the bench with nine minutes left in the half and gave the Lions' motor the jump-start it needed. Although the motor took a while to turnover, with the Rams extending the lead to 19 points with 7:15 left in the half, Penn State slowly began to pick up speed.

Murphy scored 11 points in the stretch leading up to halftime as the Lions picked away and went into the locker room trailing by 12, 35-23.

Parkhill said without Murphy's play in the half, the Lions could have been out of the game a lot earlier. In the half, Penn State's starting five of Ward and Allen at the guards, Jim Newcomer at center, and Tom Hovasse and Ed Fogell filling the forward spots, only managed a combined four points.

"I thought Murphy did a really nice job," Parkhill said. "He's been around. Brian (Allen) got a little rattled tonight, and fortunately Murphy showed a lot of poise. It was a nice lift for us to have Murphy coming off the bench."

The Lions also started off slow in the second half, falling behind by 17 early, but Ward sent the team into overdrive and in the next six minutes Penn State drew within five, 45-41, with 13 minutes remaining.

Ward had 12 points in the streak, which saw the Lions outscore the Rams 15-6. Penn State then switched on the afterburners, and behind the strong inside play of Hovasse and reserve center Mike Peapos, the Lions knotted the score at 50 with 8:40 left in the game.

Ward took a little bit better defensively," Parkhill said. "We gained our composure a little bit more offensively, getting the ball inside a little bit more."

The teams exchanged baskets, giving Penn State a 54-52 lead, but two free throws by Carlton "Silk" Owens tied the game. The Penn State engine that had begun to run so smoothly began to sputter and when a Bonzie Colson follow gave the Rams a 56-54 lead, the Lions motor all but stalled.

A three-point goal by Owens put Rhode Island up by five and the Rams never looked back.

Rhode Island built the lead back up to eight with just over two minutes to go in the game and the Lions, despite using a four-guard combination for pressing and three-point field goal shooting, could not muster a comeback.

Conlan, Testaverde, Palmer earn AP All-American status

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Football Writer

The nation's top runner and No. 1 passer — Temple tailback Paul Palmer and Miami of Florida quarterback Vinny Testaverde — were named yesterday to the Associated Press All-American football team for 1986.

Miami and Oklahoma each put three players on the elite squad while Auburn and Ohio State had two each.

Testaverde was joined by teammates Jerome Brown, a defensive tackle, and free safety Bennie Blades, who led the nation with 10 interceptions.

Testaverde, who is expected to win the Heisman Trophy on Saturday, led Miami to a No. 1 ranking in the AP poll for the last 10 weeks by completing 175 of 276 passes for 2,577 yards and a nation-leading 26 touchdowns in 10 games. His completion percentage was 63.4 and he led the country in passing efficiency.

Oklahoma, the team Miami displaced as No. 1 after beating the Sooners 28-16 on Sept. 27, is represented by inside linebacker Brian Bosworth, tight end Keith Jackson and offensive guard Mark Hutson, all juniors.

Bosworth is one of five repeaters and nine juniors on the first team. The other repeaters are offensive guard Jeff Bregel of Southern California, defensive backs Thomas Everett of Baylor and Mark Moore of Oklahoma State and punter Barry Helton of Colorado.

The other juniors besides Blades, Helton and the Oklahoma trio are wide receivers Tim Brown of Notre Dame and Chris Carter of Ohio State, defensive tackle Al Noga of Hawaii and inside linebacker Chris Spielman of Ohio State.

The rest of the All-American team consists of offensive tackles Harris Barton of North Carolina and Danny Villa of Arizona State, center Ben Tamburello and running back Brent Fullwood of Auburn, placekicker Jeff Jaeger of Washington, outside linebackers Cornelius Bennett of Alabama and Shane Conlan of Penn State, nose guard Danny Noonan of Nebraska and defensive back Rod Woodson of Purdue.

The team was selected by the AP's regional sports editors, along with the college football editor and the sports

Nittany Lion All-Americans

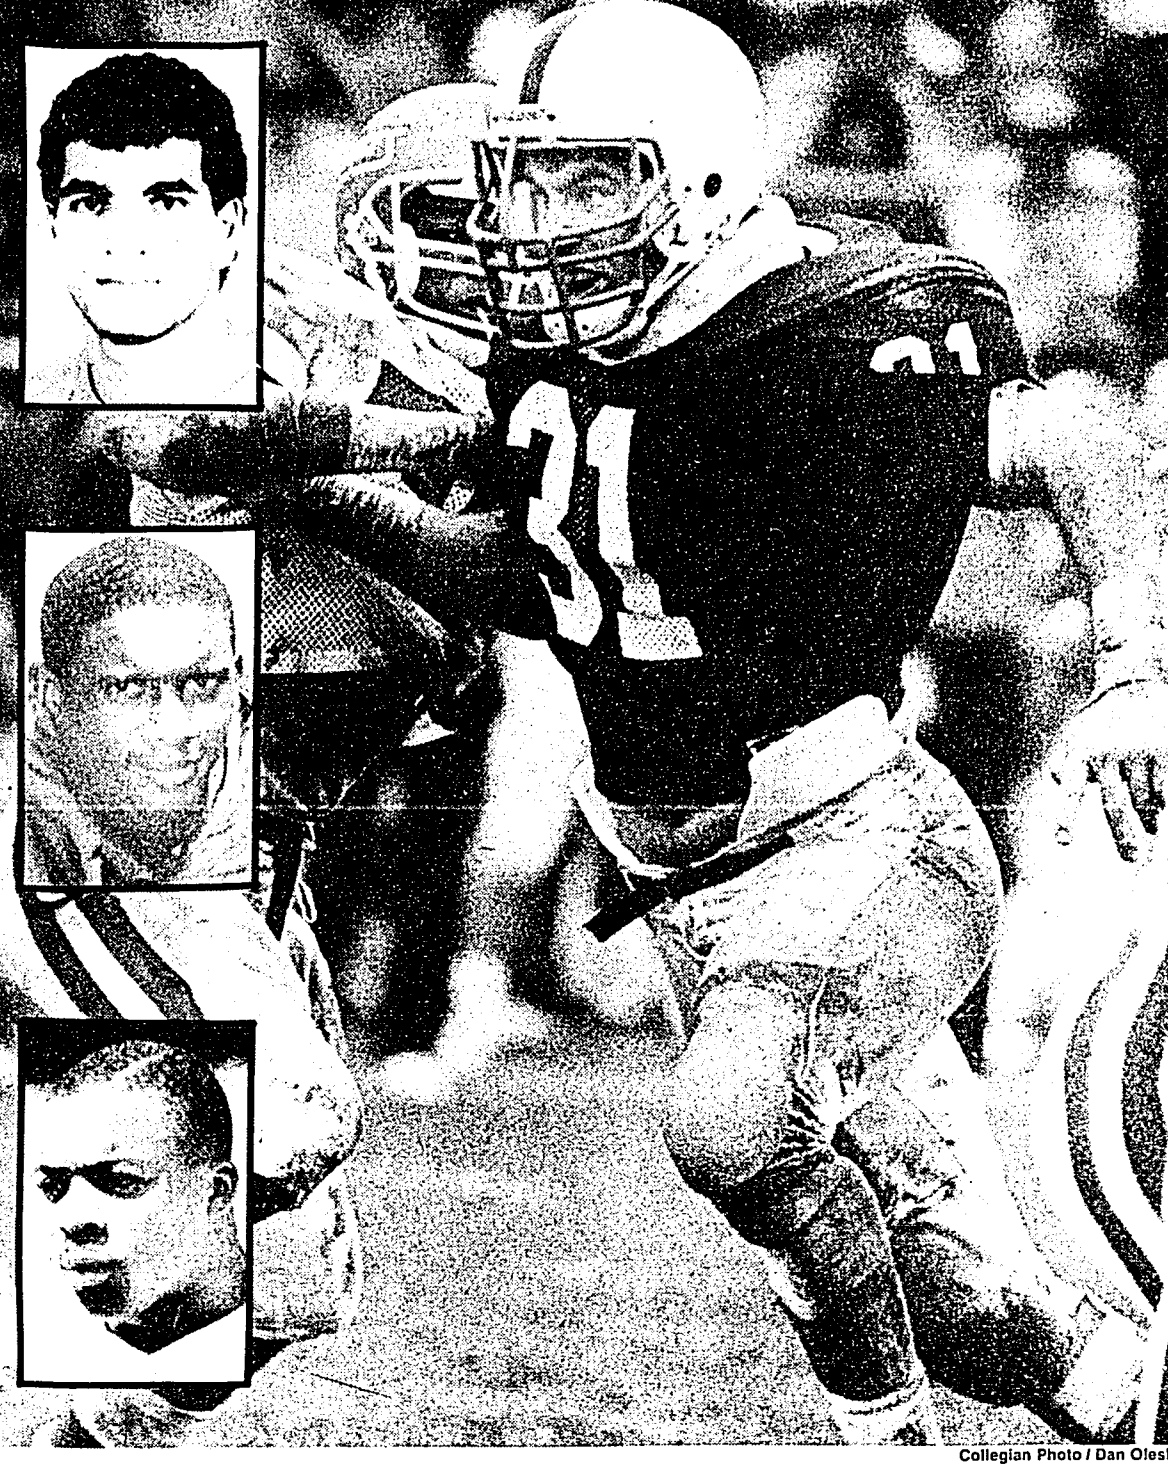

In addition to first team All-American linebacker Shane Conlan, the Nittany Lions placed 13 other players among the All-American ranks.

On the second team, Penn State is represented by offensive tackle Chris Conlan and defensive tackle Tim Johnson.

Among the honorable mentions, the Lions field an impressive crew: tight end Brian Siverling, offensive guard Dan Morgan, center Keith Radecki, quarterback John Shaffer, running back D.J. Dozier, placekicker Massimo Manca, defensive end Don Graham, nose guard Mike Russo, defensive back Duffy Cobbs and punter John Bruno.

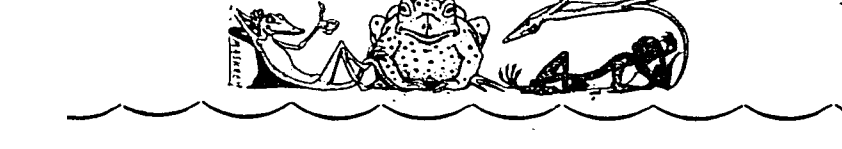

Conlan is the best defensive player of the year honors in the Western Athletic Conference by a vote of the league's head coaches.

Noonan is the best defensive lineman in Nebraska history, according to Coach Tom Osborne.

Penn State linebacker Shane Conlan, left, blitzed his way past opposing linemen on his way to All-American status this season. The senior from Frewsburg, N.Y. is joined by 15 of his teammates on the Associated Press' annual roster. In addition, three Penn State opponents who have been or will be all-too-familiar with Conlan's ability made first team status on offense. They are, from top, Miami quarterback and Maxwell Award winner Vinny Testaverde, Notre Dame's multi-talented wide receiver Tim Brown and Temple running back and Heisman Trophy candidate Paul Palmer.
