

College of Science dean resigns, receives praise

By PATTY ESPER
Collegian Staff Writer

Thomas Wartik, dean of the College of Science, will retire next September after 36 years at the University.
University officials said Wartik will be missed for his dedication to the College of Science and his fund-raising efforts.
"Dean Wartik has guided the College of Science well during his years as dean," University President Bryce Jordan said in a prepared statement. "His superb leadership and dedication to science will be missed."
"He played a key role in attracting private support to the College of Science, including the recent $10 million gift from the Eberly family," Jordan said.

The Eberly gift established endowed chairs in all of the college's eight departments.
Wartik, 65, said he is retiring because it is time for someone with fresh ideas to step in and move the program upward.
He added that his years at the University have been very satisfying and that he has enjoyed working with students, faculty and administrators.
Wartik said his role in working with the $200 million Campaign for Penn State has been enjoyable, adding that the University is on its way to becoming a first-rate research institution.
"A first-rate institution is characterized by the quality of its faculty, and these attributes are necessary to recruit and hold good faculty," Wartik added.

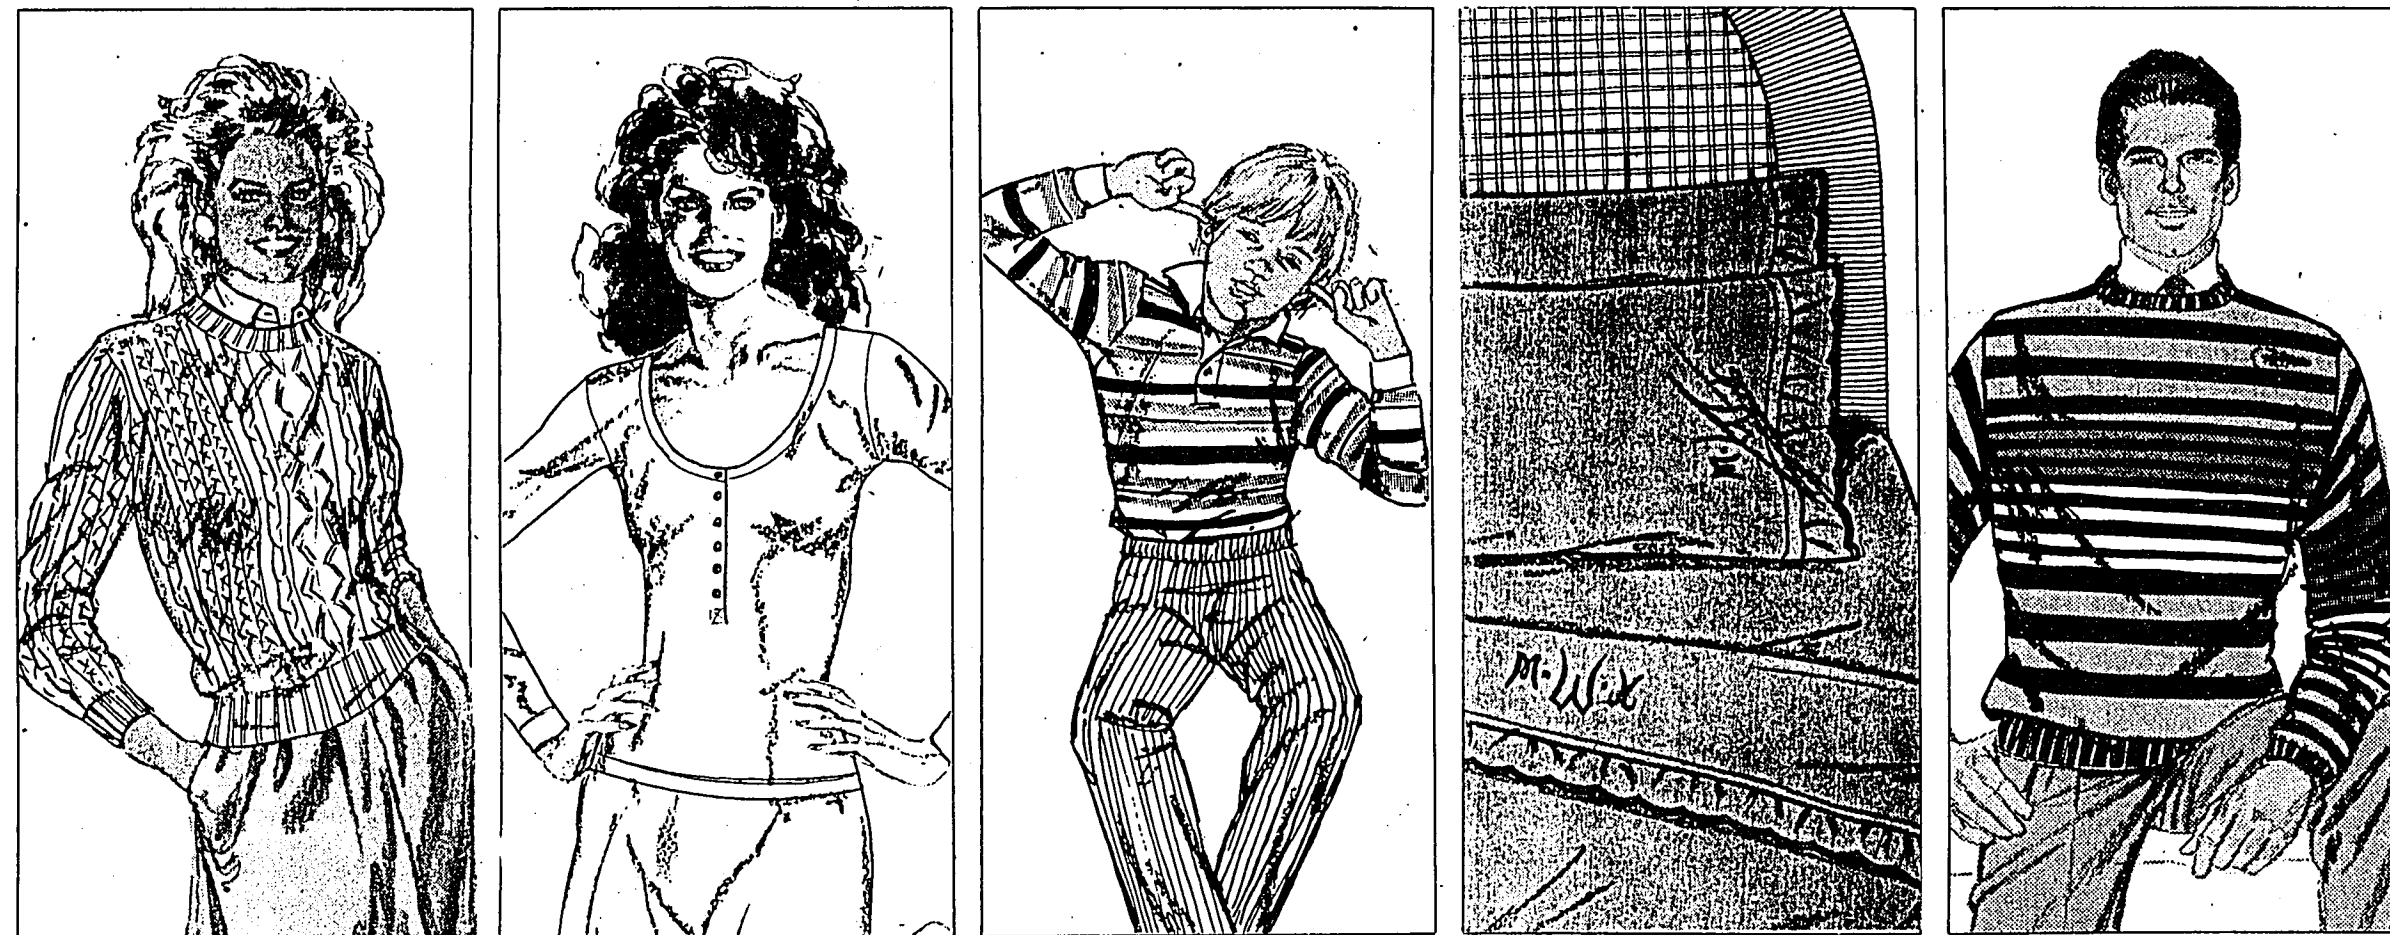

"My job has been made much easier because of the efforts of the College of Science faculty and the encouragement and support I have received from the central administration," he said.
William C. Richardson, executive vice president and provost, said Wartik has worked very hard and with great success.
"He's done an absolutely wonderful job showing donors the ways in which they can make a contribution to enhancing the quality of both undergraduate and graduate experiences in the College of Science," Richardson said.
Wartik came to the University in 1950 as an assistant professor of chemistry. In 1960, he was named professor and head of the chemistry department, and in 1971 he became dean of the College of Science.

Under his direction, the chemistry department was listed among the nation's leaders by the American Council on Education's study of graduate education.
Before coming to the University, Wartik worked on the Manhattan Project at the University of Chicago, conducting wartime research for the atomic energy program from 1945 to 1946.
A native of Cincinnati, Wartik earned his chemistry undergraduate degree at the University of Cincinnati and received his doctoral degree in chemistry at the University of Chicago in 1949.
Wartik has served as chairman of the National Academy of Science's Fulbright Selection Committee for Chemistry.

Some fruit sales leave sour smell

Some mail-order solicitations telling University students' parents that fruit baskets and candy will be delivered to their children may be fraudulent, University Police Services warns.
Police said they received complaints of such scams during the last holiday season after some solicitors failed to deliver candy and baskets for which parents had paid $15 or more through the mail.

Donald Sult, University director of conducts standards, said organizations use names such as University Rescue Committee and Help for Your Students During Final Exams. The names are intended to make them look like legitimate Penn State organizations, Sult said.
Sult said his office has received letters from parents regarding the failure of the solicitors to deliver the promised baskets, and added that the baskets are often priced much higher than their actual value. One such basket checked by his office, Sult estimated, cost no more than $2.50 to assemble.

police log

- Bob Hicks, 618 S. Allen St., reported a 15-speed mountain bike worth $49 missing from his porch Friday evening, the State College Bureau of Police Services said.
- A University student was struck by a car Saturday on South Garner Street near College Avenue, State College police said. Police said Madeline Vereck, 116 Feister, was struck by a car driven by Michael E. Singer of Morganville, N.J., when Singer attempted to turn left onto South Garner Street.
- State College police reported an orange Schwinn bicycle found at 281 E. Nittany Ave. on Saturday.
- Doug Reach, 317 Geary, reported that marijuana was being used in a room in Geary Hall on Friday evening, University police said. Two persons were identified and some marijuana paraphernalia confiscated, but no arrests were made, police said.

- A janitor discovered and released a person trapped in the ROTC supply room in Wagner Building Friday, University police said. The person had been padlocked in by an unidentified person.
- University police discovered a Domino's Pizza car-top sign in Parking Lot 83 North on Friday night. Police discovered that the sign had been removed from a delivery vehicle in Parking Area Orange B earlier that evening.
- Cathy Boyer, 317 McKee, reported a tape player worth $25 missing from her car in Parking Lot 83 West on Saturday, University police said.
