

Lady golfers at William & Mary Invite . . .

The women's golf team is going into the William & Mary Invitational, its last tournament of the spring season, with confidence.

Penn State will be one of twelve teams competing on the Ford's Colony golf course (par 72, 5,990 yards) in Williamsburg, Va., this weekend. Opponents familiar to the Lady Lions will include host William & Mary, the University of North Carolina-Wilmington, and Longwood College. Penn State Head Coach Mary Kennedy also expects a strong showing from Rollins College, a school from Winter Park, Fla.

Kennedy said that the course is kept in very good condition and should provide the Lady Lions with a good test of their golf abilities. The PGA touring professional associated with the course is Fuzzy Zoeller.

"The course is in excellent condition," Kennedy said, "and it is strategically laid-out. Shot placement will be very important. The starters played the course last year, and we went over each hole during a team meeting. That way we will have a good feeling for the course environment before we get there. This is one of the best courses on the schedule."

Kennedy will be taking five players for the team competition: Jody Harpster, Valerie Krick, Erin Borowicz, Lisa Dine and Sue Highducheck. Susan Dutilly and Janet Whitlow will also make the trip and will compete for individual honors.

"I think we have the potential to win the tournament," Kennedy said. "The women have been working on a winning attitude. They are just as good as any of the other teams. I think winning this would be a very good way to end the season for the girls."

Harpster echoed her coach's thoughts.

"I think we can place in the top three," she said. "This is the last tournament for three players, so it would be nice for them if we could win it. I think we could do it if everyone puts her mind to it."

Harpster, who played the course last year as a freshman, recalled some of the challenges it presents.

"Some of the holes have doglegs," she said, "and some fairways are narrow. We will have to hit our drives in certain spots, so there will be a lot of placement off the tee. If we don't place the ball right, it will be tough (to score well). I would say that there is a great deal of water on the course, and there are some big sand traps."

This will mark the final tournament of Penn State's spring schedule and also the last collegiate competition for Lisa Dine, Sue Highducheck and Erin Borowicz.

. . . while golfers host tourney

Hosting the fifth annual Rutherford Intercollegiate Golf Tournament this weekend should be an excellent confidence builder for the men's golf team. The tourney will be played on the Penn State Blue Course, the Lions' home turf.

"The men have been playing a lot this week and have practiced their short games," Head Coach Mary Kennedy said. "They have been going through their mental rehearsals and are preparing diligently to win. They plan to go in and win the tournament."

The two-day tournament begins tomorrow and will feature 22 teams. Kennedy feels the Penn State Blue Team is the favorite in the tournament, but she expects a great deal of competition from Gannon and Bryant, both of which are nationally ranked in Division II. Competitors from the men's district include Army, Villanova, Delaware and Rutgers.

Being the host team at a tournament is "always an advantage."

"The men will be playing on their home course," Kennedy said. "They are comfortable with the conditions and are confident. It usually takes a day or two to become comfortable with a course, so they will have a competitive edge over their opponents."

The team has not played since it placed 12th at the William & Mary Invitational April 7. Kennedy said the week-and-a-half layoff has been good, and sophomore Darrin Helfrick agreed.

"The layoff gave us time to get caught up on school work," he said. "It also gave us a chance to practice. Sometimes we don't get to practice a lot when we're on the road every week. We feel pretty good, and we've been playing well the past week. But there's a lot of pressure on us to do well. Playing at home should help lower our scores."

Also participating in the tournament will be the less-publicized Penn State White Team. Although the team might only have four players competing, Helfrick said that it has potential to do well.
