

Beating the odds in lodging search

By HANS KROGER
Collegian Staff Writer

Would you like to have friends visit State College this summer but don't have enough room and can't afford hotel rates? With a little ingenuity, students or friends looking for lodging can put a roof over their heads and still hold on to some of their hard-earned cash.

If you don't know anyone who can put you or your friends up, and you're on a tight budget, finding cheap accommodations in a town filled with empty summer apartments can be quite frustrating.

Unlike Colorado Mountain College and San Diego State University, both of which rent dorm rooms during the summer for as low as $6 per night, Penn State's extra housing space is closed to most visitors.

Donald Arndt, the University's director of housing and food services, said University policy prevents Penn State from competing with downtown hotels and motels by renting out empty dorm rooms during the summer.

"The University can only provide housing for officially sponsored educational groups, such as sports camps and conferences," Arndt said.

Therefore, now is the time to start looking for the few accommodations that are available, especially if the Central Pennsylvania Festival of the Arts is one of the planned weekend visits.

One option is to check the classified sections of local newspapers, which advertise rooms for rent in rooming houses and private homes at reasonable prices.

Another option is a bed and breakfast. Rent and Repeat, a Centre County bed and breakfast organization, provides information on local bed and breakfast rates and also handles reservations.

Bed and breakfasts are usually reasonably priced: about $20 per person night per person and $15 if you share a bathroom. Prices are about $5 more on weekends, with downtown hotels and motels by renting out empty dorm rooms during the summer.

W. German president urges global unity in graduation speech at Harvard

By ARLENE LEVINSON
Associated Press Writer

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — West German President Richard von Weizsäcker told Harvard University's alumni and graduating class yesterday there must be a return to the cooperative spirit that allowed the Marshall Plan to help rebuild Europe after World War II.

Weizsäcker said Third World countries need similar treatment and that East-West relations continue to pose a challenge to the world.

"We do not want new conflicts about borders. We have learned painful lessons from history. But borders should lose their divisive nature for people," he said.

"The plan was visionary as great victors seldom are. . . . The aim of the United States was to restore the confidence of the Europeans in their own strength, in their own political future," said Weizsäcker, in a speech prepared to commemorate another given 40 years ago in Harvard Yard.

In June 1947, at another Harvard commencement, Secretary of State George C. Marshall took 12 minutes to outline the economic prescription to repair Europe that came to bear his name.

heating, no power, no production, no material resources, no prospects, little hope.

When President Harry S. Truman signed the plan in 1948, in the form of the Foreign Assistance Act, he authorized $17 billion for grants and loans to European governments over the ensuing four years.

When masters degrees were conferred on the 233 School of Public Health graduates, they rose and shouted "Condoms!" as they tossed prophylactics into the air. Wrapped in white envelopes, the condoms were inscribed "Harvard School of Public Health Class of 1987" and below that "Ad Venereum Securiorem," Latin for "safe sex."

The crowd cheered. Graduate Tom Baiocchi, 37, of Gray, Maine, said his classmates decided to toss the condoms because, "It's clearly a good idea to protect yourself from AIDS and venereal disease. Also, the idea of throwing condoms is good clean fun."

Other schools showed their interests as well. Business administration graduates waved dollar bills. And the crowd was sprinkled with opponents of the school's investments in firms doing business in South Africa who flew pink balloons imprinted with the words: "Divest the rest."

SUMMER '87 growing with the changes

TO ENROLL ...

Each semester the Center for Counseling and Psychological Services (CAPS) offers a number of groups. Most of the groups meet weekly for 2 hours. The groups are open only to Penn State students. Enrollment is free and can be made directly through CAPS, 217 Rittenour Health Cent, 863-0395, between 9:00 a.m. and 5:00 p.m. Monday, through Friday. To participate in the group, you must first make an appointment to see the leaders. All groups have limited enrollment so come by soon if you are interested.

STRESS

Need some assistance in dealing with the pressures of classes, roommates, relationships in general, or life at PSU? This group is designed to teach coping skills which you can employ both here and after graduation. Emphasis on psychosomatic conditions will be dealt with in the group.

LEADER: Marty Marder, Psychologist
TIME: TO BE ANNOUNCED

INTERPERSONAL RELATIONSHIPS

This is a semi-structured group where group members will explore how their own thoughts, feelings, and behavior influence their satisfaction with relationships. In addition, group members will be encouraged to identify and work on changing one way in which they communicate or cope in relationships.

LEADER: Sharon Hamilton, Psychologist
TIME: Wednesdays, 2:00-4:00 (starting June 24)

EATING ISSUES GROUP

Many women deal with stress and tension by eating in excess or by starving in order to develop a certain body type. Ten to twenty percent of college-age women binge on large amounts of food and eliminate the food by vomiting, using laxatives, or going on a severe fast. This condition is called "bulimarexia" and there are treatment strategies to help the bulimarectic individual change this problematic way of relating to food and their self-image. If you are interested in being part of a group of women with these concerns, call 863-0395 and schedule an interview with the group leader.

LEADERS: Mary Anne Knapp, ACSW
Susan Seems, Graduate Student
TIME: Wednesday, 10:00-11:30

CENTER FOR COUNSELING AND PSYCHOLOGICAL SERVICES (CAPS) is a component of the Division of Counseling and Health Services of The Pennsylvania State University, University Park, PA 16802

GENERAL THERAPY GROUPS

College students often experience difficulties in feeling good, getting along, and making things work in general. These groups are designed to help students learn to deal with a variety of concerns involving feelings of depression and anxiety, resolving relationship issues, and other personal concerns.

LEADERS: Dennis Heltzmann, Psychologist
Claudia Haferkamp, Psychology Intern
TIME: Tuesdays, 1:30-3:00 (starting June 16)

LEADERS: Steven Crain, Psychologist
Beth Golden, Psychology Intern
TIME: Mondays & Wednesdays, 3:00-4:00 (starting June 10)

ABOUT THE CENTER FOR COUNSELING AND PSYCHOLOGICAL SERVICES (CAPS) ...

The CAPS staff is also available to assist students in making difficult decisions, resolving relationship issues, dealing with academic pressures, coping with feelings of depression or anxiety, and other personal concerns. If you wish to talk with someone about one of these concerns, call 863-0395, or stop by 217 Rittenour Health center for an appointment.
