Iowa students arrested in protest

The Chronicle of Higher Education reports that 30 University of Iowa students were arrested recently while protesting the Central Intelligence Agency's recruitment on campus. The demonstrators refused to leave the building, saying the CIA had no right to recruit students for its activities, which they called illegal. Protestors were charged on a number of counts, including criminal trespass and disorderly conduct.

Cal State recovering from quake

The California State University is picking up the pieces after the recent earthquake which shook regions in the state, reaching a 6.1 on the Richter scale, according to the Chronicle of Higher Education. A student was killed in the quake when part of the wall of a parking structure fell in on her. The University's campus, east of downtown Los Angeles, has been closed for seven days to begin repairing nearly $30 million of damage.
