led for the first time in the game, 49-47. The Dukes wouldn't trail the rest of the game.

The throng of Lady Lions fans tried to exhort the team on with thunderous chants of "Let's go Lions" but it was to no avail. James Madison was in complete control of the game when Michealson scored on a layup and led 62-54 with 7:05 left. But Garner nailed a 3-pointer and the crowd erupted. The Lady Lions were making a run and they appeared to find their old form. Two more Garner points with 3:39 left tied the game at 67.

This all led to a bizarre ending. Trailing 73-71, after Garner had scored on another layup, Penn State had one final chance. With 18 seconds left, the Lady Lions got the rebound and made their way up court as all the fans were now standing.

out beyond the 3-point line and shot it. However, Michealsen was right in Garner's face and blocked the shot.

"It was just a matter of putting my hand in her face and keeping my feet moving," Michealsen said. As the ball fell to the floor and the final second ticked off the clock, there was silence except for the cheers of the James Madison fans and players.

"The girls knew what play to run. I don't feel as if they knew there were 19 seconds on the game clock, which was a mental mistake. They had the play and they panicked. The timeout was something we could have used but they had the play," Portland said.

They jumped and danced on the same floor that the Penn State players had just stood on in disbelief.

"I looked up at the clock and I should have went right to the play but I tried penetrating and I pulled it back out and when Garner attempted to penetrate then brought the ball back I looked up again there was four seconds left," Garner said.

do think that when we got back into the team and within the team itself — the defeat was devastating. Yet perhaps Portland put it best afterward what the game meant for her team.

"If you don't dream the big dreams. if you don't talk about going to the Final Four, if you don't look at the trophy or talk to the best, you have no clue what the best is," Portland said. "We don't With the expectations placed on the do this to just be an OK team.'

After Carl Thomas hit a pair of free throws and Dave Degitz scored one from the line, EMU put it away. Following a timeout, Charles Thomas inbounded the ball to brother Carl. Penn State, in a frenzied effort to pressure the pass, let Roger Lewis alone underneath for a backbreaking layup with 21 seconds left.

The Lions pulled to within two, but a Neely free throw iced the game with 10 ticks of the clock showing. Lion guard Freddie Barnes missed a 3-pointer but Penn State regained the ball when Carl Thomas traveled with the rebound. With one second left, Freddie Barnes hurled another trey from the right side that caromed off the rim as time

Penn State shot only 2-of-7 from the floor in the overtime. The Lions, almost perfect from 3-point territory early, were 1-of-6 in the second half and overtime.

Penn State had a chance to pull it out in regulation. With the score tied at 58, Monroe Brown turned in a defensive gem, stepping into the passing lane and picking off a pass with 36 seconds left.

Brown was fouled but missed the front end of a one-and-one. Forward DeRon Haves snared the rebound and passed the ball to Freddie Barnes. EMU pressured Barnes in front of the Lion bench and forced a turnover.

With six second left. EMU rushed the ball up court and Charles Thomas hurled a 30-foot toss which hit the backboard as regulation ended.

The squads traded blows for most of the contest as the lead never exceeded five. The teams orchestrated effective half-court offenses in the first half, utilizing pristine ball control and capitalizing on opportunistic chances inside.

The Lions, on the strength 5-of-6 shooting from 3-point range, took a 33-29 lead at intermission. Freddie Barnes led the way with nine points, hitting all three of his 3-point attempts in the half.

With Kennedy and Hallas plagued with foul trouble throughout the second half, forward James Barnes asserted himself inside, scoring 10 of his 12 points in the half. Equally as dominating offensively in the paint was Kennedy.

"We thought long and hard about how to guard him and we came to the conclusion that he'd get his points," Coach Bruce Parkhill said. "We conceeded that he'd get 20 so it was in our best interest not to let the other guys get offensive."

Penn State, which committed only one turnover in the first half, coughed the ball up five times in the second. The man-to-man EMU defense also stifled the Lions' ability to penetrate.
