Berkeley serenader charged with disturbing the peace

By MICHELLE LOCKE Associated Press Writer

BERKELEY, Calif. - Add one more name to the list of Berkeley characters: Rick Starr, a campus crooner with a song in his heart and

The charge: disturbing the peace.

The problem? His somewhat off-key serenades

a summons in his pocket.

Thomas Ventresco. The campus administrator has filed a complaint saying the stress of working 50 yards from Starr's lunchtime performances is causing him to lose sleep at night.

Berkeley are anything but music to Starr, 46, contends he is protected by the First Amendment the campus, after all, was the birthplace of the 1960s Free Speech at the University of California, Movement.
