Allentown crime scene tapes to remain closed

ALLENTOWN (AP) — Videotape of a bloody crime scene shown in a hearing for two teenage skinheads accused of killing their family will not be released to a Philadelphia television station, a judge decided.

Videotaped and audiotaped confessions of Bryan and David Freeman, 16 and 17, and an audiotaped statement from their cousin, Nelson Birdwell III, 18, also will not be handed over, Lehigh County Judge Lawrence J. Brenner ruled Wednesday.

The videotapes show the victims' bodies in blood-spattered rooms in their Lehigh County home. The Freemans are charged with killing their parents, Dennis and Brenda Freeman, and their brother Erik, 11. Birdwell also was charged with homicide and conspiracy.

Prosecutors said a knife, an aluminum baseball bat, a pickax handle and a weight bar from an exercise machine were used in the stabbing of Brenda Freeman and the beating of Dennis and Erik Freeman, whose skulls were crushed.

The Freemans, who rebelled against their family's Jehovah's Witness religion, had tattooed "Berzerker" and "Sieg Heil" on their foreheads.

Malcolm Gross, a lawyer for WPVI-TV, had argued that the tapes became public record when they were shown and played during a preliminary hearing in April.

Brenner wrote in a 31-page opinion that any broadcast of the tapes could jeopardize the brothers' right to a fair trial by "creating a circus-like atmosphere," would invade the victims' rights to privacy and would serve no purpose except as "commercial exploitation" because reporters were able to describe them to the public after the hearing.

"Clearly, the principles of common decency and the dignity of the unfortunate victims outweigh the public right of further access to this tape," the judge wrote.

Also, he wrote that broadcast "might act as a catalyst and titillate a sick and demented mind, thereby triggering a copycat murder."

He wrote that the tapes differ from evidence shown at a trial because they are not part of an official court record. They were kept by the district attorney after the hearing and never filed.

Birdwell fled to Michigan with the Freemans and initially was charged with hindering their arrest.
